WILL ROGERS SAYS:
BEVERLY HILLS, Aug. 8. [To the Editor of The Register:] My wife and daughter just off the boat today from Honolulu with a ukulele under one arm and a surf board under the other. They claim it's a great vacation spot. They visited some of the big cattle ranches. That and that hula stuff would hit me better than trying to stand on my head on a board.
Say, my old friend Jim Reed of Missouri, and Jim generally knows what he is talking about, says the government is in the bootlegging business. Lord, as far behind as the Treasury is now they got to get into something that pays.
Our Governor of California wants everybody to take a six days' vacation. That won't affect over 10 per cent of our people.
Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

POINT BARROW, Alaska, Aug. 8.—(UP)—This far north settlement of about 250 Eskimos and eight adult whites received one of its few thrills when Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh landed their monoplane in a lagoon here at 2 a. m., P. S. T. today.
The flying couple, enroute to Japan on a leisurely vacation jaunt, made the 535 mile jaunt from Aklavik, N. W. T., through fog and against headwinds in six and a half hours.
Natives came out in their skin boats and flags were flying in the village to welcome the aviators and his wife as he brought the scarlet and black monoplane to a graceful landing.
It was foggy and misty but it did not hamper the enthusiasm of the natives. Colonel Lindbergh and wife also appeared particularly happy to reach Point Barrow after their enforced wait at Aklavik.
The Lindberghs left Aklavik at 7:30 p. m., P. S. T., Friday after being held for three days and two nights by bad weather along their route to Point Barrow.
Their journey during the night was over a flat, desolate Arctic country. Only grass and flowers dot the area.
Lindbergh battled fog and headwinds a good part of the way but finally won the race here by the signal corps radio station from Mrs. Lindbergh's radio key that they finally had flown out of the fog.
Point Barrow's population was augmented by about 20 other Eskimos, who came from nearby villages to see America's most distinguished flying couple. They chattered incessantly as the plane swooped down to the lagoon and

This Fire Had Little Chance To Make Good

SANTA ROSA, Cal., Aug. 8.—(UP)—With 150 California fire chiefs assembled nearby at a convention, a fire breaking out in an abandoned tannery here never had a chance. The flames resisted valiantly for a time, but it was obvious from the start that there was too much talent opposing it.
When the 150 visiting firemen had put out the fire, they returned to the convention last night, re-elected Captain William A. Myers of Los Angeles as president and Harry Strasser of San Diego as secretary, and adjourned. They meet in San Diego next year.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(UP)—President Hoover has determined to set up a national organization "to coordinate and support" local agencies in meeting the coming winter's burden of unemployment relief.
"The problem, whatever it may be, will be met," the president promised in a formal statement in which he announced that the probable amount of distress and methods of relieving it were being canvassed anew.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(UP)—December corn prices declined today to the lowest level since August, 1902, hitting a mark of 39 1-4 cents a bushel. The closing figure was 40 3-8 cents.
All other deferred deliveries of corn, except September, were carried down to new lows for the year. The range of decline was from 2 1-8 to 2 1-2 cents a bushel off yesterday's closing quotations.
Favorable weather reports, profit taking on yesterday's bulge, and the sensational drop in cotton prices were factors in corn's slump today.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(UP)—The defense in the trial of Jack (Legs) Diamond, racketeer, and his lieutenant Paul Quattrone, rested today, contending itself with an alibi in its effort to beat government charges of a prohibition conspiracy.
Diamond, who is known in the underworld as the jackal or bullying type, did not venture onto the stand. Instead he chose to end his defense after presenting documents to show his presence in a hospital victim of enemy guns or abroad at the time he was accused of building up a beer business in the Catskill mountain summer resort territory.
Three character witnesses testified for Quattrone this forenoon.

Professor E. O. Lawrence is now in the east seeking an 85-ton electromagnet as the principal equipment for the research, according to M. S. Livingston, his associate.

WILL CARRY FLOOD CASE TO HIGH COURT

REDWOOD CITY, CALIF., Aug. 8.—(UP)—Out of a courtroom turmoil that followed a judge's order directing a verdict against her, Mrs. Constance May Gavin emerged today determined to press her fight for a daughter's $4,000,000 share in the Comstock lode fortune left by James L. Flood.
Bewildered by the sudden ending of the famous will fight, which came when 84-year-old Judge George H. Buck took the decision out of the jury's hands and found for Flood's recognized heirs, Mrs. Gavin sobbed bitterly as she ordered her attorneys to prepare an appeal.
The judge himself kept to his chambers. He expressed confidence in the legality of his action, although under hundreds of mulling, angry citizens started a movement to recall him from the bench.

JOHN MILLS FINED $1000 IN SAN DIEGO

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 8.—(UP)—John P. Mills, real estate man, who pleaded guilty to charges of contributing to the delinquency of two minor girls from the Hollywood "love mart" was fined $1000 by Judge Clarence Harden in superior court today.
Mills and his attorney, Judge Leonard Wilson of Los Angeles, paid the fine in cash. District Attorney Thomas Whelan recommended against a jail sentence on the ground that Mills testified for the state in the unsuccessful trial in June of Alexander Panagiotis, Jesse H. Shreve, William Jobelmann and Olive Day.
Judge Harden remarked that the "love mart" party in El Cortes hotel here last October 30, out of which the case grew, was "apparently not much of a success."

MUNITIONS DEPOT UNDER HEAVY GUARD

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 8.—(UP)—The national guard munitions depot, near Golden, was under military guard today while officials investigated a reported plot to bomb the depot.
Extra precautions were taken to prevent any possibility of the bombing. The depot at present contains 200,000 rounds of rifle ammunition, 100,000 rounds of pistols, 300 .75 millimeter shells and a number of gas grenades.
The plot was reported to guard authorities by C. W. Carroll of Colorado Springs, who refused to reveal his source of information until state authorities had full chance to investigate.
He said, however, that the Golden bombing was to have been one of a series of such outrages throughout the country, and indicated that communists were behind the plots.

TEXAS SOLONS TURN DOWN OIL MEASURES

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 8.—(UP)—Failure of the Texas legislature to pass conservation measures in its present special session may spell ruin to the American oil industry, Governor Ross Sterling told the United Press today in an interview.
Both houses of the legislature defeated bills yesterday which would have created a conservation commission to regulate the drilling of Texas oil and its production. The defeated measure, sponsored by the administration, constituted an important part of proposed remedial legislation. The special legislative session was convened expressly to enact it into a law.

mistle relations court, where Mrs. Risa von Sternberg had haled the director to answer charges of non-payment of alimony.

Admitting his delinquency, Von Sternberg defended himself on the score that the alimony arrangement had been conditioned upon Mrs. Von Sternberg keeping the peace, a peace which he said she had broken with sundry "harrassments."

Asked to detail the harrassments Von Sternberg said his former wife had involved him in filing suits against "a certain lady." There were more questions, and "the certain lady" suddenly was named as Miss Dietrich.

Charging that Miss Dietrich was the cause of their divorce, Mrs. Von Sternberg added a long bill of particulars, according to copies of her complaint. Among them, she charged Miss Dietrich with having opened accounts in Von Sternberg's name in furniture and clothing stores in Los Angeles—"Something he would never let me do."

Besides the alienation suit, it was disclosed, Mrs. Von Sternberg also has on file a suit charging Miss Dietrich with libel and asking $100,000 damages.

Improvements in sanitary conditions at the river camp.

That all be returned to their jobs, "without discrimination" after demands are met.

That ice water be supplied until drinking fountains are installed.

That dry rooms be installed at all tunnel entrances, a safety miner placed in each heading and an eight-hour day be made standard in every camp.

Frank Crowe, superintendent for the Six Companies, Inc., of San Francisco, contractors for the half-billion dollar project, denied the trouble was serious, admitting that "perhaps a hundred or more men" had quit.

The minimum wage now paid labor is 50 cents an hour, Crowe said, and the average wage is 56 cents.

"The discontent is manifested largely as a result of I. W. W. agitation," Crowe said. "The company will be glad to get rid of all men involved."

He did not pretend to speak officially for the Six companies.

Twenty-seven Die In Three Months

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Deaths on the country's greatest construction job, Boulder dam, have totaled 27 since operations began in May.

A report today to the department of the interior from John C. Page, government construction engineer, showed that 18 men have died from heat prostration. Since June 21 the thermometer at the dam never has fallen below 79 degrees and has soared at times to 128 degrees in the shade.

Five employees of contractors have died in accidents, two from falling rock and three as a result of explosions. Two employees drowned and two died of illness, while four men not employed died at the construction site.

The report was furnished at the request of Secretary Wilbur, following publication of various charges that the death rate at the dam is excessive and that the contractors are guilty of neglect and carelessness in providing for safety of their workers.

Page, in reply, cited the statement of a national safety council representative and other independent investigators to the effect that "while conditions are bad on account of the weather, no serious charge of neglect or carelessness can be made against the contractors."

After refuting the Lindberghs probably will continue down the coast past Port Lay, then over the village of Kotzebue and skirt the seaward peninsula along the edge of Bering sea past Fairway Cape down the coast to Nome.

There are many small streams and lakes on the peninsula, which would afford landing places in case it was necessary. From Point Barrow along the arctic coast there are also places where it would not be difficult to land a pontoon-equipped plane, despite the fact that the ice pack has pressed close to the shore.

"She will take hours," Gilbert said.

"I don't blame you," Ford said to Gilbert when the adjournment was granted, "for not wanting to hear that news."

Miss Rohrbach will say, according to the state, that she was typing in the office adjoining Crawford's when she heard a noise like two shots. She ran to the door immediately and encountered a man the state claims was Clark. He had just walked out of Crawford's office.

Her testimony will about conclude the circumstantial case the state has built in an attempt to prove that Clark shot Crawford to death in a political argument over Clark's candidacy for municipal judge, and that he then shot Spencer because Spencer was the only living eye witness to Crawford's death.

Clark will be tried later on the charge that he murdered Crawford.

FILES SUIT OVER THREE-CAR CRASH

A three car wreck was the basis of a suit for $26,698.55 damages filed today by Retta S. Thompson, in which the Irvine company and Dorothy Clark are named as defendants. The complaint said Dorothy Clark was acting as the agent of the Irvine concern when the car she was driving was involved in the mishap.

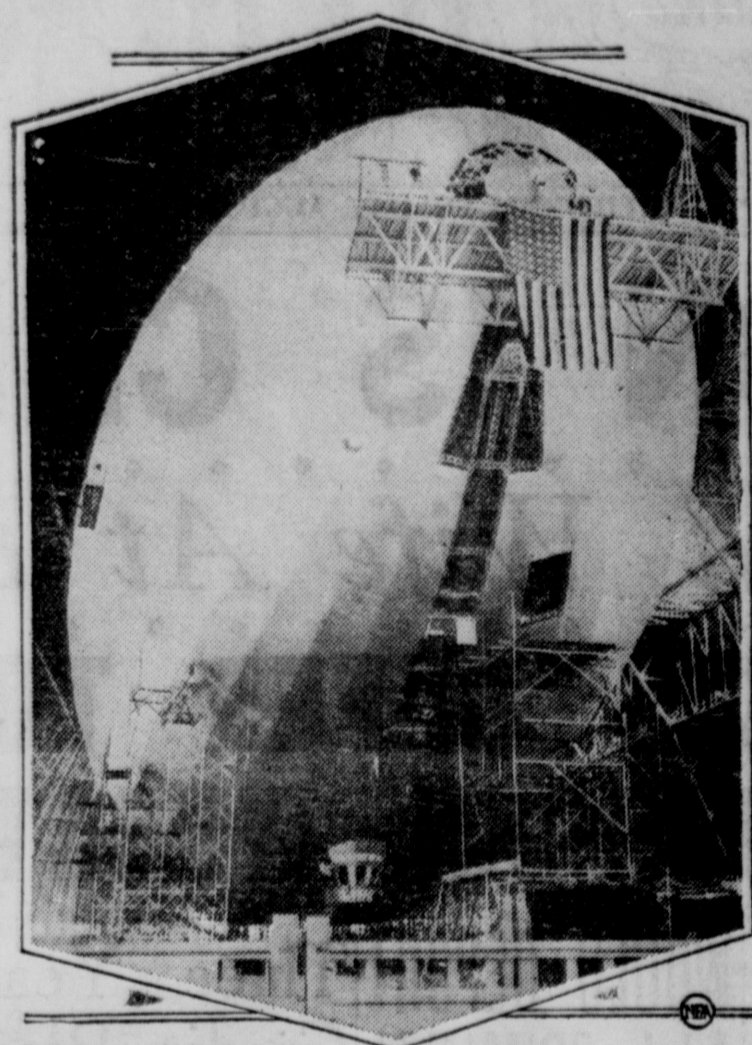

The complaint said that Mrs. Thompson, riding in a car driven by her son, Lee Thompson, was injured when the car driven by Dorothy Clark stopped suddenly without notice and the Thompson car struck it from behind. A car driven by C. D. Dunning then crashed into the rear of the Thompson car, the complaint said. The accident occurred on the state highway about one and one half miles south of Tustin on May 29.

could hardly wait until Colonel Lindbergh and his wife were brought ashore.

It was believed that the flying couple might leave late today or early Sunday for the cutter Northland, which is at Icy Cape, about 140 miles southwest of Nome.

The coast guard cutter has a supply of fuel for the Lindbergh plane. Although the ice pack was fairly solid in places it was assumed that Colonel Lindbergh would have little difficulty in landing alongside the Northland.

After refueling the Lindberghs probably will continue down the coast past Port Lay, then over the village of Kotzebue and skirt the seaward peninsula along the edge of Bering sea past Fairway Cape down the coast to Nome.

There are many small streams and lakes on the peninsula, which would afford landing places in case it was necessary. GREAT CROWD ATTRACTED TO ANNUAL CIRCUS

One of the best events of its kind ever staged here was witnessed by a crowd of at least 1000 persons last night when 300 playground children produced a circus at the high school athletic field, under the direction of L. W. Archer, playground director.

Every seat was full in the grand stands, which were arranged as they are in a real circus, and many children sat on the grass in order to see the performance. The events were presented just as they are in a real circus. On either end of the exhibition area was a platform and in the center was a ring. The acts came on in "blocks," three being in motion at the same time on the three locations, and being replaced with three others when the performers were through.

A parade of strange and wonderful animals preceded the circus proper. Music by a 37 piece orchestra of children under the direction of S. J. Mustol opened the performance and aided the entertainers in their acts throughout the event.

apparent ease. The 12 gas compartments of the ship were filled with just enough helium to lift it.

Christening of the Akron marks the climax to the government's plans for a superlative dirigible, plans that date back seven years.

The navy's two prize aircraft then were the Shenandoah and the Los Angeles which had just been delivered from Germany.

With no definite prospects for a new craft but to keep abreast of progress, preliminary work was started by the bureau of aeronautics to design a superior dirigible, when the Shenandoah encountered disaster in Southern Ohio, the necessity of a replacement was felt.

In 1926 congress authorized construction of the Akron and her projected sister ship, the ZRS-5, which will be started soon.

Costing more than $5,000,000, the Akron offers superlative features in almost every department of design. It is powered by eight gasoline motors with a maximum speed of 84 miles per hour, and carries sufficient fuel for a round trip transatlantic flight. It is 755 feet long, 146.5 feet high, and 137.5 feet wide.

L. A. MAN'S BODY IS FOUND IN NORTH BAY

RICHMOND, Calif., Aug. 8.—(UP)—Coroner Audrey Wilson of Contra Costa county opened an inquiry today into the death of a man believed to be Fred De Witte of Los Angeles, whose body was found in San Francisco bay last night.

Letters in the man's pocket indicated he was a publicity man working for the Cinderella roof garden in Los Angeles. The body apparently had been in the water some time, the coroner said.

who have come illegally into this country. I know of no more important work before the country than to rid itself of alien criminals."

The secretary said his deportation program required better cooperation from state and municipal authorities and stronger laws. In several respects his position varied from that endorsed by the commission. He said the cases referred to by Oppenheimer in support of his charges arose prior to Doak's term, when James J. Davis was secretary of labor.

President Hoover is understood to be considering recommendations to congress in December for correction of some conditions cited by the Wickham commission. Henry W. Anderson of Virginia and Kenneth Mackintosh of Washington refused to sign the report. In dissenting reports they said they would not join in such a challenge of law administration without further personal inquiry. Nine commissioners signed.

Usurp Power

Immigration inspectors are described in the report as combining in themselves the powers of detective, inquisitor, judge and jury in determining the fate of aliens. Oppenheimer hinted at dishonesty in the immigration service, but not on a large scale.

Outstanding among the charges against administration of the law were:

That seizure and preliminary examinations of aliens often is by methods "unconstitutional, tyrannic and oppressive."

That inflexibility of the law separating a deportable alien from his family "violates the plainest dictates of humanity."

That there is reason to believe many are now deported who might be permitted to remain if their cases were properly considered.

That patrol and immigrant inspectors "are insufficient in number and generally have not the necessary qualifications properly to use their tremendous authority."

That inspectors often act as detectives to uncover a case, then as court to try it and even as stenographer and interpreter during trial of the cases they have zealously worked up.

That immigrants are subjected to these and other hardships because many of them do not understand the language or the proceedings and are unable financially to employ attorneys to represent them.

Recommendations and suggestions were:

A board of alien appeals should be established under the general lines of the board of tax appeals to sit in final judgment on all alien denials, superseding the present immigration board.

The labor department should be deprived of alien deportation functions except those of investigation and prosecution of cases before the alien board.

Better Inspectors

A higher class of immigration inspectors should be obtained and some training provided for them. (Now many are not even questioned in Washington before their appointment.)

Discretion should be permitted the new board to let deportable aliens remain if deportation would result in unnecessary hardship to American families.

Attorneys should be furnished aliens by philanthropic societies interested in that work to assure a fair trial before the board.

Aliens should not be deported to countries where their political opinions might cause their death or extreme difficulty for them.

Agencies for prevention of smuggling aliens should be increased.

In a seven-page summary, the commission absolves aliens from the general suspicion that the foreign born in this country have been "responsible for a disproportionate share of current crime."

Oppenheimer's report relates many instances of hardship and cruelty. He complained raids were being unjustly made on seamen's dance halls and homes in search of aliens; that rights of citizens were infringed by immigration agents in their zeal; that preliminary examination of aliens showed evidence that statements were extorted illegally and unfairly from ignorant witnesses; that agents used stool pigeons.

NANCY CARROLL RETURNS

Nancy Carroll, bride of Bolton ("Life") Mallory, has returned to Hollywood after a honeymoon in the East. Before leaving she completed "Personal Maid" for Paramount.

DEFAULT DIVORCE DECREES GRANTED

Three divorce decrees were granted in superior court yesterday by Judge H. G. Ames and Judge G. K. Scovel. All divorces were issued on default of the defendants.

Mary Watson was given an interlocutory divorce decree by Judge Scovel from Clyde A. Watson. Her complaint was based on charges of cruelty and assertions that Watson used liquor. They were married in 1930 and separated on June 11, 1931, the complaint said.

W. V. LeFlore was given a decree after his complaint had alleged that Ruth LeFlore deserted him on April 12, 1930. They were married in 1929 and separated on April 12, 1930. Judge James issued the decree.

Lathan N. Horton was given a decree from Herman E. Horton, by Judge Ames, after her complaint had accused him of cruelty and drinking liquor. They were married in 1908 and separated on July 18 of this year.

We have always had the finest vault equipment

The founder of the First National Bank, Mr. M. M. Cruickshank, established the policy of first class safe and vault equipment. He tore down the vault purchased with other bank fixtures in 1886 shortly after the First National opened its doors, so that a vault a little more modern in construction could be substituted. (NOTE: While this was being done, Mr. Cruickshank and his son, A. J., now President of the bank, both slept upon the bank floor guarding the funds on deposit.)

The Bank has moved and enlarged several times, and on each occasion the latest in safes and vaults was installed. The present vault is a marvel of impregnability. Protected not only by steel and concrete, its walls are interlaced closely with sensitized wires which would give instant alarm. It is the finest, safest, most convenient vault equipment of modern times.

It suggests the policy of safety and stability that has made this bank great.

D. A. MAKING INVESTIGATION OF DEATH CASE

Pending outcome of an investigation being conducted by District Attorney Sam L. Collins, which also was recommended by a coroner's jury, Robert Monath, of Reno, Nevada, is being held in the county jail in connection with an automobile crash near Huntington Beach Thursday in which Aurelia Donahue, 16-year-old Mrs. Robert Monath, received a broken back, John Tinsley and other passengers in the car driven by Tinsley were painfully injured.

The verdict returned yesterday by the coroner's jury probing the death of the Donahue girl, read: "We the jury find that death was due to a fractured skull caused by an auto accident when auto driven by John Tinsley and Robert Monath collided on the Coast highway and we recommend that the district attorney further investigate the accident."

Collins said today that he had ordered a transcript of all evidence taken at the inquest and will examine it immediately, and if there is sufficient evidence against Monath charges will be filed. If the testimony is insufficient he will be released immediately, the district attorney said. Young Tinsley, son of a former Huntington Beach police chief and star high school athlete, was unable to attend the inquest due to injuries received in the crash. Four girls, who were riding in the automobile with Tinsley, and the Donahue girl, testified that he was driving at a moderate rate of speed when the large car driven by Monath whirled out into the road ahead of them.

Monath testified that he was driving north on the highway when an automobile in front of him stopped suddenly. As he turned to the right to pass the car, he saw the car driven by young Tinsley coming toward him. Monath said he turned his car still farther to the right, which proved to be the wrong direction.

Motorcycle Officer Howard Rubideaux testified that the Monath automobile skidded along the highway for 45 feet, veered to the right and skidded another 45 feet. The officer declared that there was ample space for Monath to have turned his machine to the left, but that construction work on the highway blocked the right side of the road.

It was revealed at the inquest that Monath had no driver's license and that his wife usually drives the automobile. Prior to the time of the crash she had turned the car over to her husband and was asleep in the rear seat of the car when the crash occurred.

Funeral arrangements for the accident victim have not been completed.

DRIVING DRUNK SENDS TWO TO JAIL FOR YEAR

Two men were sentenced to the county jail for terms of one year as conditions to granting probation when they appeared before Superior Judge H. G. Ames yesterday in connection with charges of driving while drunk.

R. O. Newton was given probation for five years, while Cleofas Romero was given the same term of probation. Romero's operator's license was suspended for one year. Both men had pleaded guilty to the charges.

Francisco Flores appeared before the court yesterday on a charge of grand theft. His original plea of guilty was withdrawn by permission of the court and he is now scheduled to answer to his arraignment on August 14. The court appointed Fred Forgy to represent him.

Hollis Cunningham pleaded not guilty to a charge of non-support and his trial was set for August 26 at 9:30 a. m.

CONTRACT FOR DAM LET SEPTEMBER 1

Officials of the Irvine company hope to let the contract for the dam contemplated at the head of Newport bay on or about September 1, it was learned today. Unusual conditions at the site of the dam have necessitated a longer time in which to complete the plans for the structure than would be necessary on other sites. The dam also has a number of features unique in this type of project.

It is anticipated that it will cost approximately $140,000 and is being designed to impound 14,000 acre feet of water.

Registration On Election Closes Aug. 20

Registration for the Metropolitan Water district election will close on August 20, County Clerk J. M. Backs announced today. This year registration closes 40 days before an election instead of 30 days as heretofore.

Backs pointed out that anyone who voted at an election last year and has not moved since, is entitled to vote at the water district election without re-registering.

COUNTERFEIT CASES BEING PROBED HERE

With Ed Epps and Stephen R. Borge returned to the Orange county jail and with Fred and Robert Thompson being held in Los Angeles, all of them awaiting their preliminary in Los Angeles, August 20, on federal charges of counterfeiting. Chief Criminal Deputy Arthur Eells and Deputy Sheriff E. T. Nickles are continuing their investigation in connection with robbery charges filed in Orange county against the two Thompson brothers.

Mrs. Laura Thompson, wife of Fred Thompson, is also being held in jail under $2000 bond on a burglary complaint. According to Eells and Nickles their investigation has revealed that prior to moving to Garden Grove where they were arrested as members of an alleged counterfeit ring and burglary ring, the Thompson brothers had served a sentence in prison at Winnipeg, Canada, and were later deported for their participation in the liquor "racket" there.

At the time of their arrest the Thompsons were connected with the recent theft of several valuable rugs from the Ludlum Cleaners in this city. Ten of the rugs, valued at $1000, were found in the Thompson ranch house.

PROWLER FLEES AS FLASHLIGHT AWAKENS CHILD

Frightened when 13-year-old Frances Merchant awakened and called to her uncle, a prowler fled from the home of Emmett Mallot, 921 South Ross street, early this morning. Members of the police shotgun patrol scoured the neighborhood but could find no trace of the man.

The girl, who is visiting at the home of her uncle and aunt, awoke at 2:30 o'clock and saw a strange man in her room. The prowler was using a flashlight in his apparent search for valuables and beams from the light had awakened the child. The frightened girl called to her uncle and the man leaped from an open window and fled. He made his escape in an automobile that was parked near the Mallot house.

Investigation revealed that the prowler had used a bent wire to lift the latch on a screen over a rear window to gain entrance to the house. He had passed through the kitchen, dining and living rooms before entering the room where the Merchant girl was sleeping. The child's call to her uncle frightened the prowler away before he had secured any loot.

RILEY BACK FROM FRIEND'S FUNERAL

Harry D. Riley of 2115 North Ross street had returned today to his duties as Studebaker distributor for this county, after an absence of several days in San Diego, where he was called by the illness and death of a friend, a life-long friend, Lester R. Davis of that city.

The funeral was held yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, with burial in the San Diego cemetery. Davis and Riley were both born in Flint, Mich., and their friendship dated back to the second grade of school. The death of Davis ended a close comradeship that has extended since school days.

Thief Gets Pistol Of Former Officer

Apparently frightened away by the unexpected return of the family, a burglar fled from the home of Mrs. Frank Skinner, former Huntington Beach police matron, without securing loot other than a pistol belonging to Mrs. Skinner.

According to her report to Deputy Sheriffs Dean and McKelvey, who investigated the robbery, Mrs. Skinner, her mother and children, returned to their home on Huntington Beach boulevard, near Midway City, shortly before 9 o'clock last night. Upon entering the home Mrs. Skinner saw closet doors open and bureau drawers ransacked. A hurried check revealed that a gun was the only loot secured. This was the second gun stolen from Mrs. Skinner.

BUSINESS AND COMMERCIAL LEADERS OBJECT TO SIX DAY HOLIDAY PROPOSAL

Gov. James Rolph's proposal to proclaim a six-day statewide holiday, starting September 4, which would be known as Fiesta Day and continuing through Admission Day, September 9, has started a reaction in Santa Ana business and financial circles that may culminate in a formal protest to the governor, it was learned today.

With bankers and business men closing many business deals might be endangered. A. J. Cruickshank, president of the First National bank held the same opinion and said that the proposal by Rolph is "a bad one". He gave practically the same reasons for opposing the plan as Constant gave and said that the legality of the majority of business transacted during such a "work moratorium" could be questioned.

Frank J. Was, manager of the Security First National Bank of Los Angeles branch here said that as far as the banks of Santa Ana are concerned they could not stay closed for a six day period. If every line of business were to cease for the six day period, he said, it might be possible for the banks to close but "people must eat and they must buy clothes and as long as these facts are true the stores must remain open and the banks with them."

Not Effect National Banks. The proclamation by the governor would have no effect on national banks anyway, he said, unless the United States controller of currency gave his permission for them to close. Alex Brownbridge, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants bank said: "The proposed holiday is for an entirely too great a period and could not be accomplished without harming business in general. The holiday would not help the Santa Ana business and would antagonize outside business to such an extent that I believe that it would be harmful to the Fiesta."

"I do not believe the plan can be put over and I believe that Governor Rolph will see the matter in a different light when he gets the state-wide reaction to his proposal."

Protest in similar vein was heard from other business and financial leaders in the community. John Knox, mayor of the city and member of the real estate firm of Knox and Stout said: "The plan is bad business. It would be detrimental to the business man who employs his help on the weekly or monthly pay basis as he would have to continue to meet the payroll in spite of the fact that his income would cease for the six days. It would be equally bad for the employee who gets paid by the day as his pay would cease during the holiday and there is no working man who is paid sufficiently high wage at this time to stand a six day layoff."

City and county officials feel that the proposal to take a six-day holiday would cause work to pile up to such an extent that it would take weeks to overcome the handicap. In addition to this it is doubtful whether or not the proclamation could be enforced from a legal standpoint.

A. I. Mellenthin, vice-president and cashier of the Commercial National bank declared that the proposal would be impractical from a banking standpoint and he does not believe that the chief executive of the state has the power to designate the six days as a holiday. In commenting on the impracticability of the plan Mellenthin said that, should the plan succeed, it will mean a great risk for all banking houses in the matter of commercial paper and the handling of notes falling due during the holiday.

Affect Orange Growers. The plan would be particularly disastrous to the orange growers and shippers of this county whose season of present and big crop of lading and bank drafts are required every day. Any let up would mean a great financial loss, he declared.

Charles Cotant, manager of the Santa Ana branch, Bank of America does not believe that the proposal is feasible from a banking standpoint. The loss of thousands of dollars in interest would be probable, he said, in the event the banks were forced to close for six days. The same period would not be observed by correspondent banks in other states and a considerable loss in interest on items due during the holiday might be expected. Another consideration he said is in the matter of screw. He said payments due on papers in screw in other states must be made promptly and were the banks to

DEMPSEY, LEONARD BARRED IN ILLINOIS

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—(UP)—Jack Dempsey and Benny Leonard will have to stage their comeback bouts in some other state besides Illinois, General John V. Clinnin, chairman of the state athletic commission, said today.

Clinin also said he had sent a communication to all National Boxing association states advising against allowing Dempsey or Leonard to appear in the ring again.

"We allowed Charley White to attempt a comeback," said General Clinnin, "and we don't want any more bouts like that here. We sympathize with boxers who meet financial reverses after their retirements, but we also sympathize with the customers lured to these pitiable exhibitions under the misapprehension that they will see a fight."

S. Windle Sold Worthless Stock, Claim

Believe it or not S. Windle was made a defendant in a lawsuit over oil stock which Korlees Ashton claimed was worthless in a complaint on file today in the county clerk's office.

The plaintiff claimed that she paid $1500 for stock in the Shannon Oil company, which she said Windle induced her to buy. Mura C. Green also was named as a defendant in the case.

Divert Traffic At Doheny Park

Motorists will encounter a detour on the state highway between Doheny Park and San Clemente. At the present time, southbound traffic is being diverted at Doheny drive, opposite the Beach club, over the Palisades, to rejoin the highway by the bridge at the southern end of the Doheny Palisades properties. Northbound traffic is being diverted over the same route. Very little loss of time is being occasioned to motorists by this detour, as the whole route over the Palisades consists of paved streets.

GIVE WARNING ON SPIDERS IN ORANGE COUNTY

Beware of the black widow spider! This is a warning issued by the county health department today when it became known that an unusually large number of the poisonous spiders had been seen in Orange county.

In many instances reports have come in to the department that in places where the spiders are lurking, that never before have such a great number of the spiders been seen. The spiders frequently make their abode under floors and in crevices in old barns and other dark buildings.

The spiders are called "black widows" through their custom of eating their mates and are also known as the "hour glass" spiders due to the markings on the abdomen. Wilbert Mayase of Placentia, who was bitten by one of the spiders about a week ago, was confined to bed for several days. Deaths have been recorded in some cases when the spiders have fastened their poisonous mandibles on small children.

INJURED DRIVERS SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Ward Elkhorn, 17-year-old ice man of Balboa island, and Dallas Blue, 26, Newport Beach mechanic, seriously injured in an automobile crash Thursday night near Newport Beach, are improving, according to reports from the county hospital.

Kenneth Gorman, 20, of Los Angeles, who was riding with Blue, was uninjured in the crash. Elkhorn and Blue, drivers of the two automobiles involved in the head-on collision, were rushed to the county hospital immediately following the smashup and for a time their conditions was considered grave.

The accident, which occurred at the Beacon service station just west of the Newport Beach city limits, was due to a fog that obstructed the intersection of three roads at the point of collision, according to reports received at the hospital.

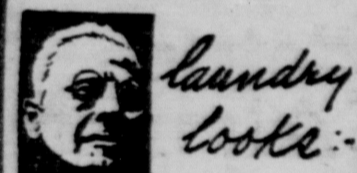

DOHENY PARK

DOHENY PARK, Aug. 8.—Robert (Bobby) Leyden, a young son of Don W. Leyden, superintendent of the Doheny Palisades properties, has returned to his home after an absence in hospital of several weeks, where he underwent a serious operation.

A new ruling has been made by the management of the Doheny Palisades Beach club and plunge to the effect that the plunge will be closed to members every Monday until 1 p. m. This has been found necessary in order to give the pool a thorough weekly cleaning, and to facilitate the use of the suction pumps for the elimination of sand from the tiled floor.

S. V. Corteyou, district engineer of the State highway department, today visited Doheny Park. A thorough inspection was made of the highway improvement work which is at present under way. Corteyou had a conference with H. E. Leyden, resident manager of the Doheny Palisades, and the state engineers, relative to the progress of the work. It is believed that owing to the hazardous nature of the work along the bluffs, some re-routing of traffic may be considered.

Max Allnutt, secretary of the local chamber of commerce, says that business conditions in Doheny Park are decidedly good at the present time. Satisfactory reports have been made by local business men that considerable benefit is being felt from the increased population. The state highway job now under way further augments the payroll funds in circulation in this district. In addition to this, there is a force of state engineers and other employees resident here. The secretary also states that he is very pleased at the influx of vacationists this season. All of the Palisades beach houses are full to capacity.

She was a most inexperienced little bride.

When her husband snored and she accused him of it, she believed him when he said he wasn't snoring—he was dreaming about a dog and the dog was growling—

And when the grocer told her he had some extra nice string beans—she asked him how much they were a string—and when someone gave her some gooseberries, she shaved 'em and served 'em as grapes.

She was green!

But for all her inexperience, when a salesman from a rival laundry called and tried to convince her that she could buy a better laundry service than SANITARY'S, she turned him down cold.

Just as long as we are doing her laundry work, she knows that one department of her housekeeping will be perfect—beyond any criticism—absolutely free from worry.

Why don't you try us?

Call our salesman.

TOXIE FRIGANZA, WHO TAKES LEADING ROLE OF KATRINKA IN "HIS HONOR THE MAJOR," SUCCEEDING BLANCH RINGS

BROWN MEETINGS NEAR CLOSE; MANY RESPOND TO CALL OF EVANGELIST

"If any man willeth to do His will, he shall know" was the text upon which Evangelist John Brown based his message last night, culminating in perhaps the greatest number of decisions which have been made any evening during the campaign. Proof of the deity of Christ is in following His teachings was the answer given to the preacher's question "How May I Know Christ?" which was the sermon subject.

As usual the huge tabernacle rang with the singing of the choir and the congregation during the opening half hour of service. Following the congregational singing the Arkansas Travelers, boys' quartet, sang several selections. A spiritual message in itself, Elden Farrar, musical director of the Brown meetings, sang the stirring hymn "Ship Ahoy."

"Jesus Christ never introduced a new doctrine to the world," was the opening statement made by the revivalist. "He stood before the world claiming to speak the truth but never claimed to teach anything new. All was given him by His Father. If any man will do His will, is the challenge to the infidels and unbelievers of His day. These are the most natural words for him to use if He was the son of God and the last words He would use if he were a fake."

Demonstrated Duty

"What were the claims of Jesus Christ?" asked the preacher. "He made some astounding claims and demonstrated every fact of deity. He said to the Jews, 'Before Abraham, I am,' and again He said, 'I and my father are one.' For these assertions the Jews attempted to stone him and finally nailed him to the cross. 'You tell me what your attitude toward Christ is and I will tell how you stand in every fundamental of Christianity. Jesus Christ was what He claimed to be or else He was a cheat and a fraud. There is no halfway mark. 'No man has found a flaw in statements of Jesus Christ through all the centuries. The word of God has continued its triumphant march through all the centuries and the Old Book will stand until it has accomplished its work here on earth. The claims of the present day which stench the nostrils of the world is the result of taking the Bible away from the youth,' shouted Brown.

"There absolutely are no contradictions in the Bible, but many young people throw down the Word of God because of the teaching of some upstart who has never studied it."

"You hear everywhere people say they can't understand the teachings of Jesus Christ and that it is all too mysterious and unfathomable. It isn't because they don't understand the word of God and the teachings of Christ, but they know that if they embrace the belief it will mean they will have to stop sinning. It is just an alibi. Would you be willing to believe if you did understand? This is Christ's challenge. Whenever anyone will get off his dignity and pray to God he will grasp the teachings of Christ."

Bible Stand Test

"If men wouldn't believe anything that they did not understand here on earth, they would look them up in the 'nether world.' The Rev. Mr. Brown said, 'We are embracing every day, all these perplexing facts of science, but when it comes to the wonderful revelations of the Bible we don't understand. That's nonsense! Why do you believe in modern science? You say men have spent years in proving their theories. We believe the testimony of others who some times deceive us, but the Book which has stood the test of ages we turn away from. 'You don't have to believe the word of God because Christ said so, or because the Bible says so, but believe in it because it stands the test. Test it! You can go straight to Jesus Christ and know for yourself,' was the closing appeal made to the audience. Scores of people answered the call and filled the inquiry room in the period of after service.

Tomorrow night is scheduled to be the best night of the Brown meetings in Santa Ana. There will be services tonight, tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow night.

The evangelist has been in Santa Ana four weeks in an evangelistic campaign arranged by a group of laymen from various churches in this city.

JOHN E. FORD
Prominent Bible Lecturer of Seattle

EVANGELIST JOHN E. FORD will tell you the exact location of heaven and give you the name of the planet on which it is located; what its inhabitants look like, their occupation; whether the children grow up; if we will know one another; why heaven will never grow tiresome; if we will feel bad because some are missing, and can we enjoy heaven without them?

Most people want to go to heaven to escape hell, but are not much interested in either place. How can you blame them? About all that they know about heaven is that it is up. Every question will be answered in a clear, simple way so that all will understand.

Lay your plans to hear this great opening lecture on heaven even if you must cancel some other engagement. It will be your only opportunity to hear it!

This is one of the most important Bible lecture series that has ever come to this community and is to be held in one of the largest tabernacles that has ever been erected in this part of the country.

ENDERLE GIVEN CLEAN BILL BY SAMUEL M'NABB

Attempts by federal prohibition agents to secure an investigation of Deputy United States Commissioner Maurice Enderle of Santa Ana for his refusal to issue warrants for three Santa Ana drugists accused of selling liquor were balked today by United States Attorney Samuel McNabb, according to advice received from Los Angeles. Deputy Prohibition Administrator Walter L. Peters had filed a complaint against Enderle and requested an investigation.

In denying the request McNabb told Peters that Enderle's obligation to issue warrants for the arrest of liquor law violators was "discretionary." Enderle's impending resignation from office was given by McNabb as the commissioner's reason for refusing to issue the warrants.

The complaint against Enderle was lodged by Peters after the federal official here had refused to issue warrants for the arrest of Ted Cook, druggist at the Santa Ana Drug company; Ed Gorzeman of the Givens-Cannon pharmacy, Seventeenth and Main, and E. L. Madison, 314 North Sycamore street. The warrants were requested by Federal Prohibition Agent J. F. Rowan on complaints charging the trio with sales of intoxicating liquor. Enderle said that he refused to sign the warrants because Rowan did not present proper identification, required by law when such complaints are requested, and because of his impending resignation. Enderle asserted that Rowan offered to send to Long Beach for his credentials and, while he was telephoning to McNabb's office for instructions, the prohibition agents were ordered, by their superiors in Los Angeles, to proceed through another court. The warrants were issued by City Police Judge John Mitchell.

YEAR IN JAIL IS CONDITION OF PROBATION

One year in the county jail and forfeiture of his operator's license will be the penalty paid by Marvin Raymond of Maywood, who pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter after an automobile accident on June 11 in which John W. Rutledge, 69, of Anaheim route No. 4, was fatally injured. Raymond already has been in jail for approximately two months, but this time will not apply on his term.

The year in jail is a condition imposed by Superior Judge H. G. Ames in granting probation to Raymond for a period of five years. The hearing was held yesterday afternoon. Raymond was represented by O. A. Jacobs of Santa Ana, and the district attorney's office by Assistant District Attorney S. B. Kaufman.

Another condition requires that he use no intoxicating liquor except under prescription of a licensed, practicing physician. The court ordered that Raymond shall be confined in the county hospital when Dr. Harry Zaiser, superintendent, deems it necessary for treating the tubercular trouble from which he is suffering.

The accident from which Raymond's difficulty arose happened on June 11 at the intersection of South Spadra and Orangehorpe avenues. Rutledge died the following day, having suffered a crushed leg and internal injuries. His widow, Mrs. Lavina Rutledge, also was injured but not seriously. Rutledge was manager of a ranch at Katella owned by Mrs. R. M. Fay.

Comparative figures compiled by the Orange County Builders' Exchange on the average wage being paid for various classes of labor in construction work in Orange county cities and in outside territory are shown in the table on this page. One set of figures was established as the prevailing wage paid in Orange county at a mass meeting of contractors and those interested in the construction industry which was held Tuesday night in the city hall.

The other figures were obtained by the Builders' Exchange in answer to a questionnaire sent out all over the county. The table printed shows that wages paid in Orange county cities differ and that the figures adopted at the mass meeting also show discrepancies from average figures for the county.

The wage scale as adopted at the mass meeting was the result of the passage of Senate bill No. 26 during the last session of the legislature which makes it necessary for work of public projects.

The Orange County Exchange, in common with other Exchanges of California, offered its services in setting up the prevailing wage, and the results of the project have been tabulated through the efforts of Frederic Sanford, secretary-manager of the Exchange.

BEAN MARKET MORE ACTIVE, REPORT SHOWS

Bean markets were steady to somewhat stronger during the week ending August 7 with continued light offerings in heated demand, particularly from the east and southeast, according to the weekly bean market review of the United States bureau of agricultural economics. Trading was more active in all sections of the country than for the past several weeks. Continued light selling on the part of growers, comparatively light stocks in many of the larger eastern markets and reduced supplies of fresh vegetables over most of the country were the principal strengthening factors.

Central western markets reported considerable increase in demand from the south. Trading in California was of only moderate volume, with the market very sensitive to increase in outside inquiry which fell off somewhat toward the close of the week under failure of buyers to follow advances in quotations. The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce reports 11,225 bags of beans received at that market by rail and water during July, compared with 32,024 during the corresponding month of last year. The season's total was reported at 431,450 bags, compared with 437,770 bags last year. Non-irrigated fields in Colorado and California have mostly been injured to some extent by the recent dry weather. Irrigated areas are still in good condition, except where water supplies are short. Growing conditions in the great northern producing sections are generally favorable and recent rains have improved prospects somewhat in Michigan.

Limas Advance Limas—Quotations advanced 40 cents a hundredweight at San Francisco under a fairly good demand from central and eastern markets and a firm holding tendency on the part of growers. Prospects for the new crop are only fair in dry farming areas, but are mostly good in irrigated sections and the trade estimates the total output will be about equal to that of last year.

Blackeyes—The Texas crop has been damaged considerably by recent rains in that area. Local consumers and the consuming trade offered a fairly good outlet for the bulk of offerings at prices about 20 cents a hundredweight under those asked for California-grown blackeyes. Prices in the latter area advanced 30 cents a hundredweight during the week as a result of damage to the Texas crop and a fair demand from the southeast and the Atlantic seaboard. Remaining stocks in California are comparatively large, but are being firmly held by growers. The first fields cut in the Manteca section showed light yields.

FORD TO OPEN BIBLE COURSE HERE SUNDAY

"Where and What is Heaven?" will be the topic of the opening address by John E. Ford, prominent Bible lecturer, at the tabernacle located in the 2700 block on North Main street, Sunday night.

Ford proposes in this lecture to tell the exact location of heaven and even the name of the planet on which it is found; what its inhabitants look like; their occupation; whether the people there have bodies or are they just spirits; whether they will recognize one another; whether any babies will be born in heaven and whether children will grow up or forever remain children; and how can folks enjoy heaven if some are missing.

"There has been so much misinformation about heaven that many have come to think of it as only a fable," said the evangelist today. "They have consequently lost interest in it unless they still think of it as a sort of a rescue station from hell."

Associated with the evangelist in the meeting will be Evangelist N. C. Peterson, Santa Ana man, who will also act as song leader; and a number of Bible teachers who will give instruction in small private classes.

The evangelist was recently denied permission to erect his tabernacle at Tenth and Broadway after objection by residents of that vicinity.

Ford has followed evangelistic and Bible lecture work for a number of years in many sections of the United States and Canada with audiences of from 1,000 to 5,000. He also spent three years as a medical missionary among the Inca Indians of the west coast of South America. He also spent some years as a professional singer in church and concert work throughout the United States. The meetings will be held every night of the week except Monday and Saturday, beginning at 7:45 o'clock.

The evangelist and his party expect to be located here for several weeks. They were at Anaheim for four months, closing their campaign there on May 31. The tabernacle here will seat 1500.

Only fair yields were reported from the small acreage harvested so far in southern California. New crop Madagascari limas were in good demand at New York City at prices well above those of old crop domestic offerings.

Baby limas—Prices advanced in sympathy with limas and a fairly good demand in the southeast. The new crop in California is reported in good condition, but growers continued to hold old crop supplies, largely as a result of unfavorable prospects for several other classes of beans.

Blackeyes—The Texas crop has been damaged considerably by recent rains in that area. Local consumers and the consuming trade offered a fairly good outlet for the bulk of offerings at prices about 20 cents a hundredweight under those asked for California-grown blackeyes. Prices in the latter area advanced 30 cents a hundredweight during the week as a result of damage to the Texas crop and a fair demand from the southeast and the Atlantic seaboard. Remaining stocks in California are comparatively large, but are being firmly held by growers. The first fields cut in the Manteca section showed light yields.

Need of Economy Increases Sales Of Refrigerators

"Despite the world-wide depression, the electric refrigeration industry is enjoying the greatest business in its history," Major M. Anderson, Santa Ana manager for the William LeVecke company, Orange county dealers for the General Electric refrigerator, said today. "The sales of electric refrigerators is accelerating rapidly and it has been conservatively stated that more than 1,000,000 will be installed in American homes this year."

"While the General Electric company recently celebrated the production of its millionth refrigerator and has had a remarkable sales increase during the past six months, the unusual acceptance of electric refrigeration in Orange county has enabled us to enjoy an expansion considerably greater than that of the country as a whole."

Major Anderson explains the wide acceptance of electric refrigeration by the fact that this modern electric servant combines the pleasure of a luxury with the economy and utility of a necessity.

"In 1929 it was fashionable to be extravagant, but in 1931 it is smart to be thrifty and people are buying for utility and economy, and, because the General Electric refrigerator meets these two requirements, we made a new sales record in 1930."

The Rev. Mr. Owings, who is president of the Ministerial association, said today that these services are for all people who are interested and that a cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

WEEKLY SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Saul Converted and Commissioned

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.

Editor of The Congregationalist

Next to the coming of Jesus into the world, and the great events connected with his life, death and resurrection, the most important event in history was the conversion of the apostle Paul, known by the name of Saul until the time of his conversion.

Here, however, we are not so much concerned with the historic significance and effect of that conversion as with its spiritual significance and its place in the early movement of Christianity. The conversion of Paul brought into the Christian movement in its very beginning a man remarkably adapted to become the outstanding missionary of the new faith. Paul was, first of all, a Jew, well trained in the law and in the lore of his nation. He was a man, also, evidently of wide education, able to quote from the Greek poets, and responsive to the whole culture of the eastern world. These endowments of intellect and training were associated with a physical energy and power of endurance that made him indomitable as a traveler and ready to undertake almost any task, no matter how arduous. Besides this physical endowment, he had a fervency of spirit and a patient courage that made him almost fanatical in his zeal and blind to every obstacle and every danger that might in any way oppose his purpose.

New Outlook

What Christianity did was to take all these natural endowments of Paul and give to them the enrichment of a profound conviction and a great cause. Christianity did not so much change his moral character and his moral purpose as give him a new outlook and a new spirit. He spoke of himself later in his Christian experience as having lived in all good conscience up to that time. As a Jew he had been sincere and earnest, and Christianity was for him the enrichment and fulfillment of all that had gone before. "After the way that they call here," he said at a later day, "so worship I the God of my fathers." In his own thought and in his conception of the new faith there was nothing at war with all that had been right and true in the religion that he had professed.

There was, however, a very distinct wrench in his life. He had been a persecutor. His zeal and earnestness had been the intensity of a bigot. His very zeal had blinded his eyes to the beauty of love and to the need of evidencing love as the surest guarantee of the reality of one's religion. It was this discovery of the God of love, manifested in Jesus Christ, that transformed Paul, that turned him from Saul the persecutor into Paul the lover of his fellow men. He describes this experience in his life as one of obedience to the heavenly vision.

The Inner Light

Perhaps we are too apt to associate that reference to the heavenly vision with the outward events that happened on the way to Damascus. But the keen student of life and of human experience can easily see that what happened on the Damascus road was but the final stage in a process that had been going on in Paul's soul since the day that he stood by and saw Stephen stoned to death. The outward events were but giving effect to the turmoil that was going on in Paul's own heart, and the vision to which he was obedient was not simply the strange light that blinded his eyes on that Damascus road, it was the inner light that was dawning upon his soul. Henceforth Paul was a new man. He had come in contact with Jesus Christ, and Jesus Christ had become for him the atmosphere and the dwelling place of his life.

COUNTY AUTO CLUB RECEIVES LICENSE

The Orange County Auto club has received a license from the industrial department of the state to conduct an auto club business for the ensuing year, it was announced today by Clyde Walker, president. There are fewer clubs in California this year owing to the more rigid standards of qualification outlined by the state law, which was amended at the last session of the state legislature, Walker declared. Last year there were but nine auto clubs in the state that were licensed to do business. One of the reasons why many clubs in the state are not in business this year is because the law calls for the posting of a $100,000 bond, Walker declared. While many new clubs were started last year, nearly all of them were forced to quit business, he said.

Hold Funeral Of Accident Victim

WESTMINSTER, Aug. 8.—The funeral of John Haxton, 43, local resident, who met his death Sunday as the result of injuries sustained in an automobile accident in which his three younger children were injured, was held at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon from the Dixon funeral chapel at Huntington Beach, with the Rev. Luther A. Arthur in charge of the service.

The interment was made in the Central Memorial park cemetery and pall bearers included J. J. Hylton, C. E. Hylton and J. Tretton, of Westminster; Richard Arnett, of Midway City; Wayne Arnett, of Cypress and David Stark of Garden Grove.

Mr. Haxton was a native of Kansas and had been in this state seven years, six of which had been spent in Westminster, where he was well and favorably known. Mr. Haxton leaves his widow, a son, Jesse Haxton, 22; Teddy, 7, Ruby and Ruth, twin daughters, 4, and the tiny son whose birth occurred the day following Mr. Haxton's death; one brother in Kansas City, and a half sister, Miss Rhoda Haxton who has been in Westminster for several months. Jesse Haxton, who has been a patient at the county hospital the past month, had the third operation performed on his spine this week.

TALBERT

TALBERT, Aug. 8.—Tom and Harry Giesler and Bob Nelson have left the Maricopa mountains, where they have been deer hunting, and telephoned from Arroyo Grande that they were on their way to Pismo to enjoy the clam hunting and fishing before returning home. No deer were killed by the party.

Herbert Hamrol of San Francisco joined Mrs. Hamrol Monday at the home of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Giesler, and Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Giesler and daughters will accompany the Hamrols to San Francisco to visit relatives in Mrs. Giesler's former home. Mr. and Mrs. Giesler will be away at least a week and if Mrs. Giesler finds that another sister's plans to come south on vacation in about a month are definite, she and the ladies will remain and return with her.

Mrs. I. C. Warner and children, Norman and Howard, of Huntington Beach visited one day in Talbert, where they were guests in the homes of her mother, Mrs. Mary Hoffman, and sister-in-law, Mrs. Harvey Warner.

John Pope, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pope, Freddie and Betty Pope and Miss Florence Smith of this place, and Mr. Pope's daughter and granddaughter, Mrs. Mabel Rozelle and Miss Edna Mae Rozelle of Compton, formed a party to Catalina island on a day's trip.

THEME: "BYWAYS OF DEPARTURE FROM 'THE FAITH'"

Text: "In the latter times some shall depart from the faith."

These are strenuous, treacherous times. We are facing tremendous problems, and multitudes, finding themselves in the grip of immense forces that they cannot understand or control, are bewildered and puzzled. In every field of human life and activity the world is experiencing startling and revolutionary changes. Politically, socially and educationally, we see the established order of centuries being overturned and new ideas and ideals coming to be accepted. In such a world situation it is impossible that the established standards and ideals of the Christian religion should escape serious scrutiny and trial. Whether or not we desire it or wish to admit it, such a religious crisis faces us.

Jesus Christ laid down the fundamental principles of "the faith." They were clear and simple. Man, lost in sin, needed a saviour. Jesus Christ was that Saviour, and by faith in Him men might be saved from sin and receive the gift of everlasting life. He also gave certain clear teachings concerning the characteristics which would be found in the lives of His true followers, all of which was designed to enable all who believed in Him to enjoy, by reason of proper heart conditions, peaceful relations with God and with man, and to live happy, normal lives.

"Some shall depart from the faith," declared the great Apostle Paul, and it is undeniable that this departure is evident all about us. Three byways lead from the high road of "the faith." These we shall consider.

COME to CHURCH

The Church Is the Meeting Place of God and His People

A SERMONETTE

BY REV. U. E. HARDING

Pastor, Church of the Nazarene, Santa Ana, Calif.

"In the Latter Times Some Shall Depart From the Faith"

Church of the Nazarene, Santa Ana, Calif.

1. Fanaticism. On this byway of departure are those who profess to find in the teachings of Jesus the basis for abnormal and highly exaggerated religious experiences. Turning from the plain emphasis of the Master on the great fundamentals of man's relation to his God and to his fellow-men, they leave the highroad of clear divine provision and holy living, and find themselves on the winding and confused byways of extreme emotionalism and human manipulation—a maze from which they are seldom able to make their escape.

2. Cult-ism. On this byway are those for whom the teachings of Jesus are not sufficient. As a usual thing they do not deny or oppose the teachings of the Saviour, but claim some additional revelation beyond them. A glance at the Saturday edition of any great metropolitan daily will show the amazing variety and number of such groups. Underlying most of them is an attempt to escape the reality of sin and its consequences. But sin still remains a solemn and terrible fact from which there is no escape except through faith in the divine Christ. On this byway are those of whom Paul continues, "giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." And the tragedy of it all is that the majority of adherents to the modern cults are being drawn from the ranks of the Christian churches. "Awake, awake, O Zion!"

3. Modernism. The travelers on the two ways previously mentioned are few compared to the multitudes that are being turned into this third byway of departure from "the faith." The influence of this movement bids fair to affect seriously every group of professed Christian believers. The reason is that modernism strikes at the very heart of Christianity. The modernist makes sin a psychological and physiological problem, hence no spiritual saviour is needed. His insistence on an evolutionary process in human development, in the face of masses of mental, moral and spiritual evidence to the contrary, leaves no place for a divine Son of God by whose power we may be redeemed from the grip of sin. He disputes the authentic claims of Jesus to deity, scoffs at the miraculous, and ridicules the sacred sacrifice of Calvary and the glorious resurrection from Joseph's new tomb. Religious experience becomes a curious psychological phenomenon, and places of reward and punishment are declared to be nonexistent.

In the face of such conditions we remember and declare that "the foundation of God standeth sure." (2 Tim. 2:19). In the midst of man's bewilderment, guessing, and experimentation, Jesus Christ, the matchless Teacher, the spotless Character, the towering Personality, the divine Saviour, is "the same yesterday, and today, and forever." (Heb. 13:8). "Heaven and earth shall pass away," said He, "but my words shall not pass away." (Matt. 24:35). It is time that the professed followers of Jesus Christ, of whatever group or creed or denomination, awaken to their responsibility and, reaffirming their loyal allegiance to "the faith," determine to stem the tides of fanaticism, cult-ism, modernism, and worldliness. Jesus Christ is still the hope of the world. Through Him, and Him only, can this poor, sin-cursed world be saved from ultimate and eternal ruin.

Continuing Mary Carmichael's Great Story

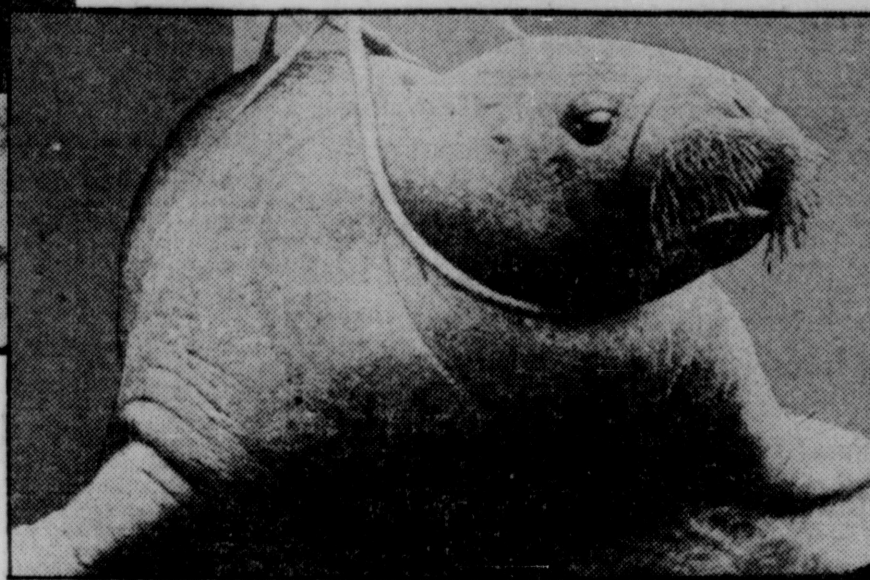

Wild Animals Wanted

II. Animal Adventures in the Arctic

From Asia's jungles to Far North barrenness goes the Carmichael family on its world-wide hunt for big game, and in this part of her experiences, Miss Carmichael tells of fights with polar bear, caribou, walrus—and the best dog story you ever read

Mary Carmichael and two appealing husky dog puppies . . . kidnaped by a childless rival of their mother.

Lassoed and ready for shipment to a zoo . . . a huge walrus similar to the one whose capture Miss Carmichael describes in this article.

Brother Jack . . . another of the roving Carmichael family.

By MARY CARMICHAEL

WE had delivered, alive and well, the 19-foot python that had so nearly killed the bush pig. We had delivered the hyena, the tiger and the other animals about whose capture I told last week, in my recital of our experiences as live wild animal collectors in Asia.

Accordingly, the last details of our Asiatic expedition were at length finished, and the family, my brother Tom, our leader, my brother Bob, my brother Jack, and my brother Bill and I took counsel.

Where would we go next, this Carmichael family whose business it is to bring back the live wild animals from almost any quarter of the globe? It did not take us long to decide, since we had more orders for Arctic animals than for any other variety.

Polar bears, caribou, all manner of small marine life, and every Arctic bird of which we could get a specimen—these were the orders that rested in my brother Tom's portfolio, orders from many American zoological gardens and museums and circuses. And so we started, chartering a stout ship and getting together an Arctic wardrobe for a spring and summer in the far north.

If our trip to Asia was punctuated with narrow escapes and the thrill of danger very near at hand, the Arctic trip also claimed our full ability for self-preservation, although there was only one really terrifying moment when death pressed hard and the margin of safety was too narrow for comfort.

My brother Bob was the hero of this closest encounter, and as we all discussed it afterwards, we told each other soberly that had it been any other member of the family who faced that enraged polar bear, in the place where Bob faced it and came through safe, that other member would not have been preserved to talk of the adventure in family council later.

For our brother Bob is the nimblest, quickest, most agile of the family, even as brother Bill is the world's best fisherman. But this story about Bob and the polar bear has a beginning, so let me first tell what led up to those furious few minutes that were so full of danger and excitement.

It was such bitterly cold weather in the Arctic that particular week that we sailed into a comforting cove and dropped anchor to wait till the weather moderated.

It was snug and warm in the ship's cabins, as our vessel was sturdily built, and one morning we all turned out rather late and were dressing leisurely when a cry from the man in the crow's nest told us that a lone, splendid polar bear was off a bit from the ship.

BROTHER BOB was dressed first and out to explore, while all the others, brothers and assistants, assured him they would be right along. Now all Bob intended to do was to watch the bear from behind ice hummocks till the rest came up with nets and lassos to help him take the great prize alive.

All the signs were on my brother's side—the wind blew from the bear to him, so that the bear would not catch his scent. He passed along hidden, quiet as death. How the great bear happened at length to spy him we never knew.

But all at once they exchanged glances, man and bear, there far below the ship, on that white waste of ice. And as though with sudden rage, the bear dropped his magnificent head close towards the ground and started running towards my brother as fast as he could go.

I saw all this through my glasses back at the boat. I was not unduly alarmed, for Bob had his gun and Bob is a crack shot.

"Yes," I told myself with a sigh, "here is one beauti-

Well-armed and speedy . . . one of the northland caribou that the Carmichael party went to the Arctic to get.

Brother Bill . . . "the world's best fisherman."

ful creature we will not bring home alive." In the next moment my heart stopped beating for three beats. For Bob had raised his gun, leveled it—and nothing had happened!

By this time the bear was only about 10 yards away from Bob. I set my teeth with a sudden hot prayer for my brother, out there alone with that maddened bear right upon him! Then at about three feet distance, the bear got up on his hind legs. His great clumsy forepaws clawed the air, in Bob's direction. In another moment, those cruel paws would have descended upon my brother, tearing him to pieces. I shut my eyes and prayed.

In that second Bob's unusual agility came to his rescue. He raised his gun and stepped quickly aside. As the bear lunged, my brother's gun butt descended across his nose—a bear's most sensitive part—with all the force of all the muscles of his taut young body.

Brother Tom . . . whose portfolio held orders for polar bears, caribou, Arctic birds and all kinds of fish.

The old bear went sprawling, full length in the snow. I opened my eyes again as the men were up at him, yelling and throwing lassos and rope nets in a tangle of words, screams and darting arms and legs.

Five minutes after that bear imagined he had done for this stranger, Mr. Bear himself, neatly trussed up, was being lifted to his cage on the deck of our ship, for the first lap of his journey to an American zoological garden.

But if my brother escaped with his life, the Eskimos told us that afternoon, as we all hugged a cozy fire in the cabin while the snow swirled outside, of how two other Americans, the season before, had not come off so fortunately in similar encounters.

One man had shot and killed (as he imagined) a great polar bear. He went up to the beast and bent down, with his knife out, preparing to skin it. The "dead" bear came to life, reached out its four powerful legs and grasped the unfortunate hunter in a horrible embrace, locking him within those furry members with dying intensity.

The two of them tumbled down the river bank, over and over, into the flowing waters. They were picked up downstream the next afternoon, miles away from the encounter, the dead bear still fiercely clutching the dead man.

The other unfortunate encounter was almost as tragic. This time the bear clawed the entire left side of the man, tearing off the flesh of his face. And for the rest of his life this unhappy hunter will go about badly scarred.

DOGS and Eskimos and walrus meat—these are a trio inseparably joined together for any proper Arctic expedition, and because we soon learned how tremendously important was walrus meat as food for our dogs and food for the Eskimo guides, we took added interest that afternoon when very near the shore we beheld one of the most amusing scenes of family life among the walruses that a traveler might ever look upon.

There must have been a dozen or more of the great, clumsy water beasts, playing in a strong surf that would have snapped the backbone of a careless swimmer. But how they delighted in this cold, fierce water, and how the big ones splashed spray on the little ones, perhaps by way of teaching them various methods of offense and defense in a water battle!

But things had not gone along this way a great while before a little trouble seemed to be stirring among the walruses. One very strong character among the walruses did not altogether fancy the actions of another strong character. In a second or two all the smaller walruses and the females scamped out of range, while a mighty battle broke out between the two great males.

Perhaps they were figuring for leadership of the tribe—as over in Asia those two male elephants had fought, about whom I told in my first story. Perhaps they fought for food. Perhaps they battled because they just could not abide each other.

But, for whatever reason they fought, how they went at each other! Now and then their queer, unearthly grunts would come to us. Blood trickled, as one grabbed the other within his great jaws.

But a back-breaking rush of surf freed the victim and he started, as fast as his enfeebled strength could take him, for the shore, with the other hot after him.

My brothers at once started shooting into the air. They didn't want to kill the strong one. They did dearly want to take him alive. He seemed to lose his sober sense, and, instead of taking to the water and safety behind the great, up-rearing ice blocks that were drifting about, he started out inland as fast as he could go, which was not particularly fast.

At length he stopped, spent and panting. In the next moment our men, closing in with ropes and entangling nets, had him all bound and ready for moving.

BUT no story of life among the Eskimos, nor any story of an expedition after living Arctic animals, would be complete without words of praise and wonder for those staunch aides of Arctic travel, the husky dogs.

We had many dogs, of course, four of them females, three of whom produced fine litters of eight puppies each, when we were laid up in a snug harbor waiting for the fiercely cold weather to moderate. We built what we called "the maternity ward"—three kennels for the mothers and puppies, on shore, under the protecting lee of the ship's side. And one day that was bitterly cold, I stood at a porthole for over an hour watching a poignant drama of the north and the husky dog.

I have explained we had four females, three of whom had puppies. The fourth, Girlie, had never had puppies, but she was the most intensely maternal of any of the females, as that long hour's watch proved to me.

The three mothers, Tina, Ella and Bella, happened one day, after the pups had been born for some days, to leave their kennels at the same time to go on a short exploration. At the porthole I saw them depart, and the next moment, after they were well out of sight, I spied Girlie emerge from her kennel at some distance.

She walked toward the "maternity ward" with brisk decision, like a firm lady with a purpose, an errand she meant to accomplish with speed and decision. She trotted straight along, right up to Tina's kennel. In the next moment she came out, one of Tina's puppies firmly held between her two able jaws.

While I chuckled, between amusement and amazement, Girlie trotted back to her own kennel, carrying the pup ever so carefully. She took it inside, and in a moment was out again, hurrying back towards Tina's kennel. Out she came once more, with a second puppy. She repeated this four times, and, on the fifth, just as she was trotting out with another prize, down upon her swooped Tina, in all her motherly wrath.

Then the fur began to fly. I could not see how the battle went, for whirling legs and blowing snow and mingled growls and grunts and shouting of men and squeals of puppies obscured everything. The men soon separated the dogs; the four stolen babies were brought back and Girlie sulked inside her kennel.

I am pleased to be able to add a pleasant postscript to this incident. Several weeks later we used the mother dogs for short hauls, and then Girlie came into her own. She played with the puppies, taught them how to handle themselves in sham fights, found them choice bones and mothered them with love and devotion.

ANTIQUE WHEEL FROM SOUTH IN ORANGE HOME

ORANGE, Aug. 8.—Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Nichols recently sent back from Kentucky a flax wheel which had been in the family of Mrs. Nichols' maternal ancestors, the Stans of Kentucky, for more than 150 years. The Nichols' returned this week from an extended visit with relatives and friends in both Kentucky and Tennessee and during their stay saw many interesting articles which were family heirlooms.

The flax wheel, which would probably be called by the majority of persons viewing it, a spinning wheel, is of solid walnut and is all made by hand. The wheel is mounted on the customary three legs and the entire piece of apparatus is put together with wooden pegs, not a bit of metal beyond one small bar which turns the wheel, being found. Nichols believes that the metal was a later addition to the wheel, after a wooden rod had worn out.

Nichols said yesterday that he and his wife found the wheel in the attic of her old home, near Lowell, Ky., where it had stood dust-covered and forgotten for many years. Nichols says he would have liked to have shipped a number of hand-dressed walnut planks, made about 200 years ago, which were used as a fence at the farm of Mrs. Nichols' uncle, a man of 85, whose grandfather obtained them from his father. The planks were sawed with a whipsaw while the tree was still standing. Nichols said, men climbing up the sides of the tree and working down as they saved vertically.

50TH BIRTHDAY OF CHURCH WILL BE CELEBRATED

ORANGE, Aug. 8.—Plans already are underway for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of St. John's church here, which will be celebrated in February of 1932. The church was founded by the late Rev. Jacob Kogler, who began his work with a congregation of six families in 1881, and in the following year the St. John's church and the St. John's Parochial school were organized.

The first church of this denomination was located at the corner of South Olive street and Almond avenue and an old building was moved to this site which was used at first for both worship and school purposes.

By the Rev. Mr. Kogler is identified much of the rapid progress made by the church and school. He taught in the school when it was first organized and continued as an active pastor in the church until 1917, when he resigned and retired from active church service. He was instrumental in organizing the Anaheim Evangelical church and the Trinity Lutheran church of Santa Ana.

The church used by the St. John's Lutheran church members at present is one of the most imposing and beautiful structures in the county and was built in 1913.

Committees have been appointed to make arrangements for the observance of this interesting golden jubilee celebration.

Members of the church are being urged to make a special offering for the jubilee fund.

The church is now in the process of raising a fund to build a new church building.

"NIGHT NURSE" AT WEST COAST SUNDAY "Month Of Stars" Great Success In Santa Ana

BIG PICTURES BOOKED DURING NEXT 3 WEEKS

With Santa Ana Fox theaters "Month of Stars" program one week on its way, Santa Ana film patrons have been given more than one treat during the past week, with the showing of "Politics," "The Reckless Hour," "The Common Law" and "Rebound," but even these big productions do not compare with what is still to come.

That "The Month of Stars" is all that it is "cracked" up to be is shown by the pictures at the Fox theaters during the past week, but starting this next week even bigger shows are to come to the two Fox houses in Santa Ana.

Following "Politics," which runs Monday at the Fox Broadway theater, is "Young As You Feel," Will Rogers' latest production. Then comes "Huckleberry Finn" and then "Transatlantic." Following "Transatlantic" will be "Sporting Blood."

So much for the Fox Broadway theater. At the Fox West Coast theater, after the showing of "Night Nurse," the Barbara Stanwyck film which starts Sunday, will be "Hush Money" with Joan Bennett and then "Sweepstakes" with Eddie Quillan. After "Sweepstakes" will come "The Great Lover," with Adolph Menjou, and following that is "The Public Defender," starring Richard Dix.

Entertainment at the Fox houses for the month of August is looking up from every direction, and Manager Norman Sprowl declares that throughout the entire month big pictures of this nature will be shown in the two Fox theaters here.

HAIR GOES WHITE

FUNSTERS

Polly Moran and Marie Dressler have them rolling out of their seat at the Fox Broadway theater in their latest comedy (and best) "Politics."

"MARRIAGE BED" TO BE MADE FILM

"The Marriage Bed," Ernest Pascal's play in which a new and ultramodern twist is placed upon the triangle situation, has been purchased by Paramount and will co-star Claudette Colbert and Fredric March. The picture will reunite Miss Colbert and March, who recently co-starred in "Honor Among Lovers." Pascal is adapting the play for screen use.

Paramount has awarded new contracts to Claire Dodd, actress, and Louis Gasnier, director.

"POLITICS" AT FOX BROADWAY RARE COMEDY

(By A. A. B.)

Another big boost for "Month of Stars" month in Santa Ana is the current attraction at the Fox Broadway theater.

It is "Politics," with Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, and is a picture that will rock your sides with laughter, fill your eyes with tears at times, and send little shivers up and down your spine at other points.

Polly Moran and Marie Dressler were "made" long before the advent of "Politics," but if they had never before been featured, "Politics" would immediately have put them at the top. It is one of those rare pictures that you see just now and then, and although it is comedy throughout, it is human and there is drama that rises up just as high as in any picture reviewed here in several months.

A mother love in an old woman springs up against gambling, vice and murder in her home town, because she wants to protect her little girl, and Marie Dressler is elected mayor of the town in spite of all efforts to stop her. The plot is good. The acting is better and the comedy in the picture will cause hysteria in many cases.

"Month of Stars" month will offer no better entertainment than "Politics."

MEN "SHOOT" WOMEN

It took 68 men behind the cameras to photograph Paramount's "The Mad Parade" with a cast of nine women.

SYLVIA TO PRISON

Sylvia Sydney, having completed "Street Scene," will next play "Ladies of the Big House" for Paramount.

ROBIN HOOD

Edmund Lowe, who plays the principal role in "Transatlantic" which is coming soon to the Fox Broadway theater as one of the biggest of "Month of Stars" pictures. His role is that of a modern Robin Hood.

PARAMOUNT TO FILM EIGHTEEN DURING AUGUST

Illustrating the company's conviction that business conditions are nearing a return to normal, the Paramount Public corporation announces that during the month of August eighteen talking features will be in work in the Hollywood studios. This number includes three now in production; twelve scheduled to start during the next two and a half weeks and three now in process of editing.

The full production resources of the company will be placed at the disposal of the various picture units, the studio announces, in order to carry out the schedule as planned.

Three Being Filmed

The three films now being photographed are "The Road to Reno," with Lillian Tashman, Charles Rogers, Peggy Shannon, William Boyd and Irving Pichel; "24 Hours," featuring Clive Brook, Kay Francis, Miriam Hopkins and Regis Toomey; and "Rich Man's Folly," the George Bancroft ship-building story.

Now in preparation for early starting are "Stadium," with Richard Arlen, Charles Starrett and Jack Oakie; Ruth Chatterton in "Once a Lady," Paul Lukas' initial star vehicle, "Bachelor," "Come on Marines," with William Boyd, Charles Rogers, Stuart Erwin, Regis Toomey and Skeets Gallagher; "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," with Frederic March and Miriam Hopkins; Ernst Lubitsch's "The Man I Killed," with Phillips Holmes and Nancy Carroll, and "The Night Before Marriage," with Clive Brook, Eleanor Boardman and Charlie Ruggles.

Others Are Scheduled
Others are "Girls About Town," with Kay Francis, Joel McCrea, Lillian Tashman and Eugene Pallette; "Ladies of the Big House," with Sylvia Sydney heading a star cast; "Working Girl," with Peggy Shannon; Marlene Dietrich's next starring production; and the Percy Crosby story, "Sooky," with Jackie Cooper and Robert Coogan.

Pictures in process of final editing for early releases are "Monkey Business," starring the Four Marx Brothers; "Huckleberry Finn," with the juvenile cast of "Tom Sawyer," and Anna May Wong, Warner Oland and Sessue Hayakawa in "Daughter of the Dragon."

PEGGY SHANNON IS GIVEN BIG BOOST

Peggy Shannon, with long red hair, a dark complexion and a sparkling use of make-up, is a typical modern girl.

This is the opinion of Lenore Sabine, head of the Paramount hairdressing department, who attended Miss Shannon on the set of "Silence," her second screen play.

In different eras, women used varying amounts of make-up, Miss Sabine declared. "A generation ago a rouged woman was an outcast. Yet previous to that period women used heavier make-up, on their faces than they do today.

"Women in all walks of life are now changing the color of their hair through bleaching, hennaing and dyeing. Hair is being allowed to grow out and only the darker shades of face powder and rouge are being used."

Eddie Lowe Film Is Not Air Picture

In spite of the general belief that "Transatlantic" great Fox picture which is coming here soon, is an airplane dash across the sea, the picture is really the story of what goes on on one of the big transatlantic steamers bound for Europe, and is not an airplane story at all.

The picture will show here at the Fox Broadway theater in the near future and will be one of the biggest of the "Month of Stars" pictures, according to Norman Sprowl, Fox theater manager.

The picture offers to the public a chance to travel the ocean in de luxe style, as a passenger aboard a luxurious liner, and at the same time enjoy a romantic comedy drama, replete with thrills and laughs.

The story briefly deals with a group of passengers, aboard an ocean grayhound, strangely thrown together during a passage between America and Europe. The principal characters include a Robin Hood of the half-world, played by Edmund Lowe; an old German-American lens grinder, Jean Harsholt, going abroad for his first pleasure trip with his beautiful young daughter, enacted by Lois Moran. Also aboard is a banker, escaping with several millions of his personal fortune before the bank collapses, and his wife, played respectively by John Halliday and Myrna Loy; a Swedish dancer, Greta Nissen, who is more than a platonic friend of the banker; and a crooked gambler, ready to commit any sort of a crime for money, portrayed by Earle Foxe.

"ONCE A LADY" WILL BE CHATTERTON FILM

"Once a Lady" is the definite title of Ruth Chatterton's next Paramount starring picture.

The filmization of the play "The Second Life" is scheduled to start soon under the direction of Guthrie McClintic, stage producer and director of the presentations starring his wife, Katherine Cornell.

Zoe Akins, author of "The Greeks Had a Word for It," is writing the adaptation.

INTERVIEWING FOUR MARX BOYS IS "TUF" ASSIGNMENT

By LOWEN B. HOLD
"Good afternoon," I remarked to Chico.

"Ah, it's da prince," he shouted.

"What prince?"

"Da foot prints," answered the punster.

"I've come for your life story," I blurted.

"Oh you wants my laff story, eh?"

"Yes, ha, ha. Well let's get down to business."

"How we gonna get down to business when my business is on da up and up, eh?"

"Now that that's off your chest—" I started.

"Thass chest it. Maybe you're thirsty? I make you a cherry false face, whatta you say?"

"That'll make a good lead for the story."

"O. K. I give you a lead—now you give me a head start, eh?"

"Just let me get a few statistics about you. Your eyes are brown. Just like your father's."

"What, you call me pop-eyed?"

RECKLESS HOUR THRILLS MANY AT WEST COAST

Telling the story of a girl who is swept off her feet by a rich man, only to have him tell her that he no longer cares for her, "The Reckless Hour," starring Dorothy Mackaill, is playing to big houses at the Fox West Coast theater. The picture's run ends here tomorrow night.

"The Reckless Hour" is well named. It is the story of a girl who was reckless for just one hour and then all the rest of her life regretted it. The picture is sophisticated and not recommended for children, according to advertisements of it carried in the newspapers, but the story is human and intense and one that should appeal to an adult audience.

An unusually good supporting cast is seen in the play, including Conrad Nagle, H. B. Warner and John Blondell, and the acting is superb at all times.

A father and his only daughter talk over the marriage question. The father warns the daughter against the rich man she is playing with. She does not heed the warning and is betrayed by him. Then she hates him. Another man comes into her life. He offers her marriage, but not wealth. She can not marry him, she decides, because of her "reckless hour."

The picture has a happy ending.

TALLULAH BANKHEAD TO PLAY IN "CHEAT"

Tallulah Bankhead will be starred in "The Cheat" as her next picture to follow "My Sin," Paramount officials announce. Irving Pichel, who scored outstanding success in "Murder by the Clock" and "An American Tragedy," will play the principal masculine role.

"The Cheat," written for the screen by Hector Turnbull, made motion picture history when it was first produced 15 years ago with Panny Ward and Sessue Hayakawa in the stellar roles. In the forthcoming version the character to be played by Pichel will be that of an accidental rather than an oriental.

Fredric March is back in Hollywood to start tests for "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" at the Paramount studios.

NURSE

Barbara Stanwyck has an interesting role in "Night Nurse" which comes to the Fox West Coast theater tomorrow, Sunday.

Valentino Got Start Because Oriental Quit

Sessue Hayakawa made a star of Rudolph Valentino, he revealed this week while awaiting his camera call to do a scene for Paramount's "Daughter of the Dragon." Jesse L. Lasky bought "The Sheik" for Sessue, but Sessue left the company to be an independent producer. Rudy got the part.

NIGHT WATCH SECRETS TOLD IN NEW FILM

Barbara Stanwyck, star of "Night Nurse," returns to Santa Ana the Fox West Coast theater Sunday in her latest Warner Brothers production, "Night Nurse," picture that has held Los Angeles spellbound for the past several weeks. It is expected to be one of the biggest drawing cards here the past several months.

The part Miss Stanwyck plays "Night Nurse" gives greater opportunity for the display of many qualities which make her appealing to people of all ages. It is not alone her beauty a gentle femininity—there is so intangible quality which suffuses any role she undertakes, with implications of tenderness, tragedy, lightness and compassion that is quite irresistible.

Lora Hart, is a perfect veil for Miss Stanwyck. Lora goes to a great city hospital to study to be a nurse—and during the year of her apprenticeship meets temptations, loves, fears and doubts that enthrall the imagination the beholder from fade-in to fade-out.

Ben Lyon is his rough ready best as the young hard-boiled man who comes to her for treatment of a wounded arm and wins her heart. Other favorites of the screen, play notably the wide differing parts, Joan Blondell, Lora's pal, also a nurse. Clive Gable is effective as Nick, a chauffeur who finally gets his go and as bad as he deserves. Clive Gable is effective as Nick, a chauffeur who finally gets his go and as bad as he deserves. Pleasant Hospitality Is Compliment to Engaged Couple

Although the majority of pre-nuptial parties are planned with the bride-elect only in mind, Miss Nellie Bales, entertaining last night in her home at 1032 West Camille street, was much more thoughtful and, with the approaching marriage of Miss Wilma Silver and Alan Morse Smith in mind, planned her compliment to them jointly.

Her home was made a charming place with quantities of perfect pink dahlias used, and all the appointments for an evening of bridge to stress the rosy color scheme. In the bridge contest, Miss Eleanor Ralston scored high among the girls and Harold Anderson among the men. Each was presented with a suitable gift attractively wrapped and tied.

The award of prizes gave Miss Bales her opportunity to introduce the chief feature of the evening, the presentation to Miss Silver and Mr. Smith of the array of fascinating packages brought by the various guests. A friendly little plan set afoot by the hostess resulted in all the guests being in the pattern of exquisite rock crystal which the pretty bride-elect is assembling.

To complete the evening, the young people returned to the card tables freshened with lovely individual linens and appointments and enjoyed a little midnight supper.

Miss Bales included in her guest list, in addition to Miss Silver and her fiancé, Mr. Smith, the Misses Jean Silver, Eleanor Ralston, Rose Moore, Frances Bowman, Marie Smith and Lucille Bales, Mr. and Mrs. Gail Jordan and Messrs. Harold Harrison, Francis Horton, Chad Harwood, Stanley Anderson, Wilfred Taylor and Lloyd Morris.

Local Musicians Play On Redlands Bowl Program

When the Valley Symphony orchestra of Pomona appears in the Redlands bowl Tuesday evening, August 11, several well-known Santa Ana musicians will be among the ensemble, including Edward Burns, cello; Fred G. Ferrey, oboe, and Mark Ewell, bassoon. At the midsummer concert the orchestra will include some 60 players in all, coming from Santa Ana, Pomona, Ontario and Upland, Redlands, San Bernardino, San Dimas and La Verne.

The bowl at Redlands offers a splendid setting for the hearing of orchestral music, and the concert is open to the public free of admission charge.

The program, under direction of Vernon Robinson, conductor, will include the prelude to act 3 of the opera "Lohengrin" by Wagner; an orchestral arrangement of the British folk tune "Shepherd Hey" by Percy Grainger, celebrated Australian pianist and composer; the tone poem "Finlandia" by Sibelius; the large from Dvorak's "New World Symphony" and the "Unfinished Symphony" by Schubert.

Preceding the orchestral program there will be a community sing led by Hugo Kirchhofer, celebrated choral conductor of Los Angeles, whose services have been repeatedly engaged at Easter sunrise services in the Hollywood bowl and other large open-air assemblages. The orchestra program will begin at 8:30 p. m.

Beauty School Group Enjoys Park Party

A pleasant break in their studies and work, was provided pupils of the Chicago School Beauty when they were entertained Thursday evening at a steak bake in Irvine park planned by Mrs. Katherine Gilham, proprietor of the school and head of the classes.

Members of the class who were present in addition to the hostess, Mrs. Gilham, were Miss Lillian Duncan of this city, Miss Dorothy Jessup of Garden Grove, Miss Eleanor Davis of Fullerton and Miss Mary Purviance of Orange, while additional guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Graham of Torrance, brother-in-law and sister of the hostess; J. S. Gilham, Wells Dunbar and Mr. and Mrs. M. Gilham, all of Santa Ana.

engagement to Mr. Ispen was announced she has been incentive for a succession of pretty parties.

MRS. ETHON LOUDERBACK

Furthermore, she was the first member of the college Society of Spinners to forsake spinsterhood. Ferguson of Glendale, a Berkeley alumnus, a student at Harvard Law school, and a member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity.

where he completed his first year in June after graduating from University of California at Berkeley. He is a member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity.

Luncheon was succeeded by bridge for which tables were placed in one of the spacious card rooms of the Town House. In the contest, Miss Virginia Meyer scored high, Miss Helen Rawlings, second, and Miss Edith Paine, low. Each received a beautiful gift in recognition of her ability.

Mrs. Terry received her daughter's friends in a very handsome black satin gown with touches of green, and wearing a corsage bouquet of gardenias. Mrs. Fred Storey, mother of Mrs. Ferguson, wore an all-white afternoon gown with gardenias. Miss Terry, a plump blonde with a lovely delicacy of color, was gowned in harmony with her chosen color scheme, in a graceful frock of larkspur blue crepe, with a sash of yellow roses. She graduated from Orange Union high school in 1929, and is a student of University of Southern California.

Father and Son Share Honors at Party

Mrs. James C. Conrad had a double incentive for entertaining this week in her home in Costa Mesa, for the occasion marked the birthday anniversaries of Mr. Conrad and of their son, James Jr. The latter celebrated his first anniversary.

Members of a club to which Mr. and Mrs. Conrad belong were guests of the evening. Little James didn't take so active a part in this affair as he did earlier in the day when Mrs. Conrad planned a little gathering in his honor, inviting children of the neighborhood as guests.

At the evening celebration, bunco was played, Miss Helen Pierpont and Floyd Pierpont were fortunate in holding high scores. A social hour followed, and the hostess served refreshments in keeping with a refreshing yellow motif. Tall yellow tapers graced the table where flowers and nut-cups used were in the same delicate tint. The birthday cake served was made by Mr. Pierpont, who is noted for his fine pastries.

Those present, other than Mr. and Mrs. Conrad, were Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Pierpont, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schlueter, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Furtach, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jacobs, Miss Helen Pierpont, Mrs. Ansel McBroom, Miss Mary Shepard and Leonard Gorsman.

Balboa Island Party Given for Pegasus Club Members

Another of their happy days at the beach, which members of Pegasus club have enjoyed so frequently this summer, was shared Thursday by the writers of this friendly group, who were entertained by Mrs. Nelson Visel (Holly Lash Visel) in her summer home on Balboa Island. Mrs. Visel's mother, Mrs. Fannie Lash, is an active member of Pegasus club, and it was as a compliment to her that the party was given in the recently completed and decidedly attractive cottage.

A covered dish luncheon at noon inaugurated festivities and the hostess prepared the special meat dish, while other dainties were contributed by the various guests.

There was an entertaining program of original work to follow the luncheon interval, beginning with a poem, "Habits," by Mrs. Lash. One of Mrs. Visel's expression pupils, Miss Emma Williams of Tustin, read selections from Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Second April," and Mrs. Justus Birtcher, a frequent guest of Pegasus members, contributed a surprise by reading a clever poem, "To the President and Members of Pegasus Club," voicing her pleasure in their work, hospitality and activities.

Mrs. Walter Foote followed with a poem, "What! No Pills?" and Mrs. George Bond, after reading a letter from Mrs. Hartong, who lapsed her membership when she moved recently to San Diego, contributed three graceful poems, "Blossom Time," "When the Roosters Crow" and "Katydid." Mrs. Crawford, a guest, read "Beautiful Wooding" from "Sunshine and Shadow" by J. Logan Jones, and Mrs. C. C. Brisco read an article from the Christian Science Monitor, "The Gardener Considers."

Miss Marjorie Lusk, who had been absent from a number of meetings because of illness, was cordially welcomed, and added an interesting story, "A Giving Christmas" to the program. Mrs. Visel responded to a request for music, by singing delightfully, "Weepin' Mary," "You'd Better Ask Me," and "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen," with Mrs. Brisco playing her accompaniments on the organ which is one of the charms of the home.

The remainder of the afternoon was an enjoyable but along more informal lines, as members and guests turned their attention to swimming, strolls along the beach, and the usual pleasures of a day at the shore. Those present in addition to the members and guests already named, were Mrs. Ray Brown, Mrs. Frank W. Mrs. E. H. Canfield of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Roy Winchell, another member welcomed after an absence, and several other guests.

Miss Mildred Preker, a school friend of the bride, was the pretty maid of honor. She wore blue chiffon with small hat of matching tint, smartly enhanced with a little plume. Her bouquet was of yellow roses.

Miss Lorraine Ragan, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Loris Jester Parsons, both of Orange, were bridesmaids. They wore identical costumes of yellow chiffon and picture hats, carrying bouquets of yellow roses and blue delphinium. All other accessories were in blue.

Miss Fletcher's little cousin, Phyllis Kogler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kogler, of Orange, as flower girl, wore blue embroidered orrany and carried a bouquet in blue and yellow. Equally charming was little Shirley Burkett, dressed in blue silk net over soft yellow silk, and bearing the ring on a white satin pillow.

Lovely Bride Enters
The bride entered with her father, R. J. Fletcher, and was without doubt one of the loveliest to plight her truth in the little bride's chapel. Her dark beauty was accentuated by her all-white costume, which was of her own design and workmanship. Her gown was of Chantilly lace over satin made princess style with one deep flounce. She wore a tulle veil, heavily beaded and held to her hair with a lace cap, adorned with orange blossoms.

The little gold hairpins holding the blossoms in place had first been worn by her grandfather's sister when a bride, and were worn by Mrs. B. J. Fletcher as well. She carried a handkerchief that had been her grandmother's.

The lovely crystals which she wore were the gift of Mr. Hubert. Her shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley completed the costume. After removing an orchid corsage from the pretty cluster, the new Mrs. Hubert presented the bouquet to her mother. Mrs. Fletcher wore yellow chiffon, with a pink flower corsage, while the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. William Hubert, of Westwood, wore blue lace and pink corsage bouquet.

Mr. Hubert was attended by Edwin Pizer of Los Angeles, as best man. Ushers were Howard V. Williams, Claude Stinson, Roy Seawright and William Hershey, all of Los Angeles.

Reception Held
One hundred and twenty-five of the 250 guests present at the wedding attended the reception given in the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kogler, 265 North Grand avenue, Orange. Bouquets of asters provided a setting for the supper table, covered with lace and lighted with white candles in silver holders. The wedding cake was elaborately decorated.

Members of the Sonoma State club of Orange assisted in serving the individual cakes, ices and otherainties.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Hubert left for Carmel where they will spend their honeymoon. Mrs. Hubert were an ensemble of grey and tangerine silk with matching accessories. On their return they will make their home in Lemoor Park, Los Angeles. Mr. Hubert is employed in that city.

The bride is a graduate of Orange Union high school and Santa Ana junior college. She attended the University of California at Los Angeles the past year. She is a well known vocalist of the community. While attending the university she became a member of Phi Beta, a national honorary professional fraternity of music and drama.

Prominent Family
The bride is a member of one of the most prominent pioneer families of Orange. Her grandmother is Mrs. Persis Ainsworth and her grandfather was the late Lewis Ainsworth, a "forty-niner." Mr. and Mrs. Ainsworth came to California on their honeymoon in 1852.

LOVELY ORANGE GIRL WEDS AT IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

Marked by a picturesque formality, the wedding last night at 8:30 o'clock of Miss Melva Fletcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Fletcher of Orange, and Earle Hubert of Los Angeles, took place in the bride chapel of the First Methodist Episcopal church in this city. All details of the beautiful ceremony were carefully planned to conform to a yellow and blue color motif, and the effect achieved was one of delicately lovely harmony.

Decorative arrangements were made by Miss Fletcher's aunt, Mrs. James Ragan, of Orange, and centered around mammoth yellow Jane Cowl dahlias which she raised in her garden for this special occasion. The flowers were arranged before a background of potted ferns and plants. Tall candelabra bore creamy white tapers whose flickering glimmer provided the soft light for the Episcopal ring ceremony, performed by a friend of the Fletcher family, the Rev. Franklin Minck, pastor of the first Christian church of Orange.

The musical program preceding the ceremony included vocal solos by Miss Sallie Coe of Orange, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. J. E. Coe. The songs were "At Dawning" and "Ich Liebe Dich." As Miss Fletcher was a member of Phi Beta sorority at the University of California at Los Angeles, it was especially appropriate that the Phi Beta trio should give numbers. The group included a cellist, violinist and pianist.

With Mrs. Dorothy Hill, a cousin of the bride, at the piano, the trio played Lohengrin's Wedding March for the entry of the bride party.

Party Reveals October As Chosen Month For Wedding

Revealing the interesting news that their daughter, Miss Mildred Groomer, will become the bride of Orval Heaton the second week of October, Mrs. and Mrs. W. Groomer were hosts at a pretty affair Thursday evening, entertaining in their home, 1819 West Fourth street.

Ranging from pastel to the deepest of color tones were the garden flowers used in decking the home for the happy occasion. Appreciately, the hearts was the first game introduced and Miss Sylvia Anderson was fortunate in holding high honors. Her award was a lovely crystal flower lamp, while Miss Helen Luck was consoled with a salad fork and spoon.

The game of "observation" led up to other events of the evening and was won by Miss Frances Alsop, who was presented with pretty black candle-holders. A matching cup was given Miss Anne Phillips as a consolation gift. An automobile romance concluded the entertaining trio of games, and this was of special significance, as Mr. Heaton is an employee of the L. D. Coffing company.

Mrs. Groomer then invited her guests to the dining room, where a tiny bride and bridegroom in a silver ring overhanging the prettily appointed table. A central figure was a large white bell from whose base radiated white ribbons. Guests who learned of the ribbons needed but little encouragement to draw forth tiny automobiles secreted beneath the bell. The little cars in turn yielded the announcement of Miss Groomer's approaching marriage to Mr. Heaton.

In serving the refreshment course Mrs. Groomer had the assistance of her daughter, Miss Shirley Groomer, and of Mrs. George Howlett. Guests were then privileged to see the two large cedar chests which the honoree has filled with many lovely things.

Surprise Shower
For Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Sullivan's mid-July marriage has occasioned much interest among their many friends, some of whom planned a surprise shower for the young bride recently, giving the affair in the home of Mrs. Sullivan's mother, Mrs. George Onstad, 1017 West Highland street. Mrs. Sullivan will be remembered as Miss Inga N. Onstad.

The young couple's associates in the Luther league of St. Peter's Lutheran church arranged the party. An interesting session of games took place, after which the hostess group served appetizing refreshments of ice cream, cake and orangeade. One of the cakes was an especially tempting confection, for it was heart-shaped and topped with rosebuds.

To conclude the affair Mrs. Sullivan was presented with a handsome set of dishes and table linen from her assembled friends.

Those present, other than the honoree, Mrs. Sullivan, were her mother, Mrs. George Onstad, and Mr. Sullivan's mother, Mrs. Jerry Sullivan, and the Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Glasner, Mrs. Henry Onstad, Miss Helen McFarland, Miss Anseline Haugnes, Miss Lillie Schultz, Miss Margaret Hanna, Miss Marcy Kraft, Miss Claribel Ehlén, Miss Myrtle Hubbell, Miss Lucella Koons, Miss Elsie Behrman and Mrs. Buchfinck.

CHARMING SANTA ANA GIRL

When Miss Faustina Lucero, one of Santa Ana's best known and most talented young women, became the bride of Raymond E. Cowman on Sunday night, August 2, she presented the picture of loveliness that is shown here. She wore a graceful gown of white satin fashioned with a full court train, and her veil of tulle bordered with rich lace, swept the full length of the train. The nuptials took place in the home of the bride's uncle, Sol Gonzales, 830 East Third street. Mr. Cowman, who is proprietor of the Bristol Drug store, and his bride are now honeymooning in the north but will make their home in this city.

An exchange luncheon was served at noon under beach umbrellas on the sand adjoining the cottage, the luncheon following a swim in the surf. The afternoon hours were devoted to bridge.

As a result Mrs. R. R. Suess won first prize, Mrs. N. A. Nelson the second prize and Miss Leith the consolation prize.

Varied Activities Add
Interest to Life in Summer Colony

Happenings at Santa Ana-in-the-Mountains, or Forest Home as it is known elsewhere, continue to be of interest to less fortunate folk who remain here envying their friends at the mountain resort. Part of the envy is for the glorious weather now being experienced there since the heavy rain storm of last week. This was almost a cloudburst on the top of the mountain soaring above the delightful colony, and for a little while every little waterway was a roaring torrent.

While gaiety and pleasure are the dominant notes of Forest Home life, W. W. Henry and family of 3612 South Main street, Orange, hold rather distressing memories of their trip last Tuesday. For on their way to their cottage for a vacation outing, Mr. Henry's car suddenly left the road on the curve just above the "big red bridge." Mrs. Henry and Miss Eugenia Henry were with him and both were painfully bruised and hurt, as the car turned over three times in its plunge to the bottom. Miss Eugenia suffered two broken ribs, but all three are recovering nicely in their Orange home and hope to return to the mountains soon for their deferred outing.

More and more Santa Anas are taking advantage of the remarkable campground maintained by the city just beyond Forest Home. The camp sites are delightfully shady and cool, there is ample water and wood, and there are courteous people in charge who do everything possible for the comfort and entertainment of visitors.

During the past week guests in camp have included Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Buck of Edinger street; Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Bruce, 305 South Sycamore street; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Weisgarber and family, South Broadway; Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Smith, Miss Carol Smith and Miss Aileen Adams; Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Carl and Miss Ina Carl, a teacher in Julia Lathrop junior high school; Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Hunter, 826 North Flower street; Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Williams and son Dean, and Mr. and Mrs. Newel Rogers and H. Thompson, 611 South Birch street.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Davis, 120 West Eighteenth street, are spending some time in their Forest Home cabin. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Anderson are occupying the E. T. Brannon place for two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Wilson, who are spending some time in their cottage, have as their guest Mrs. Bertha Schroeder.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Knox and Miss Marjorie Knox, who are spending the entire summer in their cottage, motored to South Fork for a visit of several days with the George Chapman family, whose cabin, "Dunrovin," on Lost creek, is the scene of much hospitality.

Elk Horn inn at Big Falls attracts many local people as well, among the recent guests having been Miss Jane White and Miss Betty Maugruder, who enjoyed a vacation from their duties at the Rankin store.

"Cloudburst" the shady mountain home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Fairbanks of West Eighth street, has been the scene of much entertaining. One house party included Mr. and Mrs. Kern Douglas and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Randall of Long Beach. Another was made up of Mrs. Mary Fairbanks and Harold Fairbanks of 1115 West Chestnut street, while Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Norton of Edgewood road and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Atkinson of North Broadway were guests on Tuesday.

Sunday parties have been very popular, recent ones including Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Williams with their son and daughter and Mrs. Williams' mother, Mrs. Eugenia Ruthertford, of Riverside drive, and Mr. and Mrs. David Meyer and their house guest, Miss Gertrude Valentine. The previous week a Sunday party included Mr. and Mrs. Mac Robins, Mrs. W. H. Harrison, Mrs. R. E. Coulter, Miss Gertrude Minor and Miss Lula Minter.

In the intervals between their entertaining, Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks are enjoying trips to various other summer resorts, including Pinecrest, Arrowhead and Wrightwood.

ANN MEREDITH'S
MIXING
BOWL

Pie Shells for Emergencies
I can tell this story on myself inasmuch as my in-laws never do me the honor of reading the Mixing Bowl. On the spur of the moment I asked them for dinner last night. I had everything but dessert planned and under way when it became necessary for me to go out for the rest of the day. I had intended baking a raspberry pie; when I was rummaging through the cold closet for something I came upon a baked pie shell that must have been at least two weeks old, so, I thought, I'll just fill this with fresh berries and they'll never know the difference. That's what happened, and even I could not tell but that it was quite as good as if the shell had been freshly baked.

I brought it to life by putting it into the oven for a few minutes, then cooled and filled it with ripe raspberries. I had some fruit syrup left from canning apricot. This I colored red, added lemon juice and thickened with corn starch. (Cook these sauces until very clear.) When it was cold it was poured over the fruit, the tart well chilled and each section served with a small spoonful of unsweetened whipped cream.

From now on I intend baking and keeping on hand at least three such tart shells for emergency use. They will keep fresh for a month if wrapped in waxed paper and stored in a box. Tiny ones can be baked in muffin tins and filled with creamed meat mixtures or anything desired.

TODAY'S RECIPE
Baked Liver with Vegetables
2-pound piece of beef liver
3 or more slices bacon
8 small onions (boiling size)
12 small potatoes
1 cup tomato pulp
1 cup diced celery
1 small green pepper, diced
Parsley, salt and pepper
3 tablespoons bacon fat
Flour to dredge liver
Heat the bacon fat in a skillet, dredge the piece of beef liver in flour and quickly brown in the hot fat. Transfer to a covered casserole and use the rest of the hot fat to saute the small onion, peeled potatoes, which must be the size of large marbles, the celery and green pepper.

When they take on a little color, arrange them around the liver, season quite highly, add one-half cup of hot water and drape the bacon slices over the top of the liver. Cover tightly and bake in a medium hot oven until the vegetables are done and no tinge of red shows when a fork is stuck into the liver. Uncover and brown the liver a little more before serving.

This amount will serve from four to six people. The calories total about 2400, with a few energy calories tucked into the total. Beef liver is rich in the vitamin which made calves' liver famous and high priced, and the long, slow baking allows it to take on the flavor of the vegetables. Salad and dessert complete the meal.

Last call for the current leaflet, Salads You Will Like to Make. A stamped, self-addressed envelope mailed to me today will bring this collection of recipes to you free of charge.

I am experimenting with several ways of canning chicken—the open bath method, and processing the chicken in the oven. If everything turns out to my liking the results will be detailed in next week's leaflet—but this is just a promise and subject to change. Look for an announcement on Monday, and until then—au revoir!

Sewing Club

In entertaining members of the Flying Needle club Thursday, Mrs. F. W. Bergendoff presided at a delectable chicken luncheon served in her home, 1141 West Highland street. All appointments were carried out in pink, with fragrant oleanders providing the floral motif. Afternoon hours were spent in doing needlework. The special prize award of the day was won by Mrs. Frank Brown.

Members present Thursday included Mrs. Erroll Barnes, Mrs. Frank Brown, Mrs. William Kintz, Mrs. Bernard Snee, Mrs. Adolph Erickson, Miss Verena Bailey and the hostess, Mrs. Bergendoff. Mrs. Kintz will be hostess at the next meeting of the club.

Fraternal Aid Union

The meeting of the Fraternal Aid union in Modern Woodmen hall on Thursday evening proved unusually interesting, notwithstanding the midsummer holiday season, with so many away on vacation.

During the business session announcement was received of the annual picnic of the order for Southern California, to be held at Tournament park, Pasadena, on August 22. Special interest was manifested in the picnic, and it is expected that a large delegation will be present from this city. Each lodge has been asked to furnish some feature for the afternoon activities, and Santa Ana has responded with a challenge to all corners for a game of indoor baseball.

After the business session delicious hot biscuits and coffee and other good things were served, through the courtesy of the Southern Counties Gas company.

A very interesting musical and literary program followed refreshments. There were two concert pianos numbers by Prof. Doerfel and orchestra numbers by members of his class. Readings were given by Mrs. Clara McCord and Clarence J. Smith, and an amusing song in German by E. R. Adelman. Prof. Doerfel and his orchestra volunteered music for dancing, which was enjoyed until a late hour.

M

MUSIC-LITERATURE-ART

MRS. H. H. A. BEACH

By RUTH ANDREWS

During past generations woman has claimed many realms of artistic expression, including literature, the drama, painting and the dance, but her activities in the field of music have been more limited. Though there have been gifted women virtuoso and singers, only a few have really achieved any enduring prominence in the field of musical composition, over which the male sex has so far seemed to exert an almost unchallenged monopoly.

So until recently the achievements of women composers have been lightly regarded. Now that woman has graduated from the narrow role of domesticity from which it is so difficult to soar upon the wings of inspiration, there is no longer any reason why her progress in the field of creative music may not be rapid. Boston is especially proud to claim as its own Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, noted for more than a generation past as America's most outstanding woman composer, as well as a pianist of international repute.

This exceptionally talented woman was born in Henniker, N. H., on September 5, 1867. Little Amy Cheney (Mrs. Beach's maiden name) came of staid New England parentage, proud to trace its ancestry back to old colonial days. From her mother's people Amy inherited strong musical tendencies, both startling and precocious in their expression.

Even in her cradle Amy showed great sensitivity to melody. When but a year old she could sing little songs, and minor themes would cause her to weep bitterly. Biographers relate that at 2 she could already sing themes from Handel!

At 4 Amy's great precocity found relief in piano lessons which she received from her mother, a musician of some talent. The unusual child made rapid progress, soon mastering many of the classics, including works from Chopin, Beethoven and Bach. Already the little tot was putting to use a remarkable faculty she possessed for improvising and transposing, and at an age when other children were playing with dolls little Amy was beginning to compose "pieces" of her own.

Up until Amy was 8 her mother had supervised her musical education.

tion, but about that time the family moved to Boston and now the gifted little girl was allowed to begin her musical studies in earnest. She profited by the instruction of several prominent piano teachers, including Baermann and Peraldo, and made rapid progress, aided especially by her tremendously accurate memory. Biographers relate that once upon hearing another girl play a Beethoven sonata, Amy was able to reproduce it entirely from memory without hesitation.

Certainly, Amy was an unusual type, for by the time she had reached her teens music had become her life, a "magnificent obsession" which consumed her wholly. At 14 she studied harmony for a time with Junius Hill and henceforth there was for her no rest. Each day her natural tendency for creative expression in music was determined to fit herself for the hitherto untrodden field of musical composition, an almost unheard of thing for women at that time.

It is especially important to note that in this field Amy was almost wholly self-taught. She devoted herself ardently to careful study and analysis of the works of the great masters, seeking unaided in their masterpieces for the secrets of creative writing. During her early teens, while other girls were concerned with parties and beaux, Amy was translating unaided the famous French composer Berlioz' books on orchestration and pouring for hours over the symphonies of Beethoven!

At the same time, Amy continued her piano study under Boston's best teachers, and at 16 she was in a concert pianist. She first appeared with a Boston symphony orchestra in the role of soloist, playing Moscheles concerto and a Chopin rondo in such successful fashion that she gave several public recitals the same season.

The succeeding year (1884) the talented young artist played a Chopin concerto with the Boston presenters, soon followed by her presentation of the Mendelssohn D minor concerto with Theodore Thomas' famous orchestra in Boston, during her 17th year. She was widely praised, and a brilliant future predicted for her.

OUTLINE FALL OPERA PLANS

By RUTH ANDREWS

The Los Angeles Grand Opera association has announced its completed plans for the eighth annual season, to be held at Shrine auditorium September 2 to October 17. Its highlights are: A premiere of a modern French opera as a spectacular opening performance; famous singers from the Metropolitan, La Scala, Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Bayreuth; three of Wagner's most popular scores with unexcelled German casts; great artists in favorite Italian operas; four new operas in the repertoire, and a new Carmen!

New operas include Henri Rabaud's delightfully melodious "Marouf," a colorful and sparkling score, based on the "Arabian Nights" tale of "The Cobbler and the Magic Lamp," and not yet heard on the Pacific coast; Verdi's dramatic "Masked Ball"; and two of Wagner's masterpieces, "Lohengrin" and "Die Meistersinger." The revivals are: In Italian—"Aida," "Il Trovatore," and "Tosca"; in French—"Carmen"; and in German, "Tannhauser."

Many new singers have been engaged. Maria Mueller is a young German soprano who has won worldwide recognition through her appearances at the Metropolitan and at Bayreuth; Yvonne Gall is the idol of the Paris Opera; Palma Petrova came to the Metropolitan last season after winning honors at the Moscow Opera; Maxine Castleton is a mezzo-soprano of rare beauty recently discovered in Los Angeles.

Among the men newcomers are: Gottfried Pistor, dramatic tenor from Cologne and Bayreuth, and choice of Toscanini for the performance of "Parsifal" at Bayreuth this summer; Friedrich Schorr, the outstanding German baritone of Berlin, Covent Garden and the Metropolitan; and Arnold Gabor and Marek Windheim, "character" baritones from the Metropolitan.

The returning singers are all popular artists in the west: Sopranos are—Ellenbeth Rethberg and Zaruhi Elmassian; tenors, Marie Chamlee, Giovanni Martinielli, Ludovic Oliviero; baritone and basses, Ezio Pinza, Louis D'Angelo, Giuseppe Danise, Millo Picco, Eugenio Sandrini and Tudor Williams. Feature ballets will be created for "Aida," "Marouf," and "Carmen" by Ernest Belcher, who is noted for his ballet productions in motion pictures. From a corps of hundreds he has selected his finest dancers for these numbers.

The conducting staff will be headed by Gaetano Merola and will include Hans Blechschmidt, Wilfrid Pelletier, Pietro Cimini, Karl Riedel and Antonio Dell'Orefice. Henry Svedofsky is to be concert master and the orchestra will be made up of members of the Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra as in the past seasons.

Armando Agnini of the Metropolitan is again stage and technical director. All scenery is designed by him and built under his supervision and through him the chorus receives its instruction in stage technique.

The chorus, selected from the chorus school of the location, will be trained by Antonio Dell'Orefice and Hans Blechschmidt. The full repertoire follows: Friday, October 2, "Marouf"; Monday, October 5, "Lohengrin"; Wednesday, October 7, "Aida"; Friday, October 9, "Tosca"; Saturday, October 10, "Tannhauser"; Monday, October 12, "The Masked Ball"; Wednesday, October 14, "Carmen"; Thursday, October 15, "Die Meistersinger"; Saturday, October 17, "Il Trovatore."

Great Britain is sending a young golfer to the United States amateur with a great chance to blast his way to the top. The lad's name is John DeForest, one of the sons of Baron DeForest.

And, if it should happen that Johnny crashes through tot the finals, the man whose magic influence had much to do with bringing out Bobby Jones may be given a part of the credit—or the blame. Last summer, after observing his son's skill with his clubs, Baron DeForest rewarded him with a trip to this country to familiarize himself with American courses and customs.

GETS SLOW START

The first American tournament in which Johnny participated was the Winged Foot Invitational last August. He didn't show what might be called genius. In the second round he drew John Foreman and was beaten out, 3 and 1. A couple of weeks later DeForest competed in the Lannin Memorial at Salisbury. He beat the former British champion, Philip Perkins, by several strokes, winding up with 394. Captain E. F. Carter won the tournament with 237 and Maurice McCarthy Jr., one of our own promising young linksmen, was runner-up with 203.

Then DeForest went to Merion for the national amateur. But here his putter began taking on strange habits and DeForest sadly chalked up 79 for his first round.

MEETS THE MASTER

He sought a practice green and began toiling over his putts. Nearby, watching him, in a group of newspaper men, stood Stewart Maiden, one of the greatest teachers the game has ever known. Maiden grimaced as Johnny putted.

"Who is that chap?" asked Maiden. He was told.

"He's going about it all wrong," said Maiden.

When the criticism of the master was borne to DeForest, he hunted up Maiden at once.

"Show me where I'm wrong. I want to qualify and I know I can't do it if I keep on putting like this," Maiden took him to the east course at Merion. They were there perhaps an hour.

DeForest started on his second round with a rush, shooting a finely putted 36 for his first nine. He missed qualifying by one stroke, encountering bunker setbacks on the way in.

But the lesson of the master stuck. In the British amateur this year at Westward Ho! John DeForest fought his way to the final, losing by the margin of one hole to Eric Smith.

When the amateurs gather August 31 at the Beverly Country club John DeForest and his Maiden-coached putter will be there. It will be a good putter to watch.

BOOK REVIEWS

By MARY BURKE KING

Lobagola by Beta Kindal Amgosa Ibn Lobagola, published by Alfred A. Knopf.

Prepare to become pop-eyed with absorption when you start upon this book. The author is a master story teller. The gist of the story is that his people are descendants of a group of Jews who were driven from Palestine after the destruction of Herod's Temple, in A. D. 70. In the succeeding centuries they drifted toward the south, until they became the principal inhabitants of some of the oases of the Sahara.

Some of them wandered as far as Timbuctu and to the jungle south of the Niger river. They mingled with the blacks until today they are a strange combination of black man and Jew. They are dark in color, we are told, unclothed like the natives about them, yet they cling to old Jewish traditions.

Lobagola, the great storyteller, says that the white man never penetrated to his country, therefore none of his people had seen a white man. The mothers planted fear of the white man in their children as some western mothers plant fear of the black man in their little children.

One time Lobagola and 13 other village boys thought they would play a joke on their elders and they left the village at night, planning to rush back with the alarm that there was a white man about, but they became so frightened themselves that they lost themselves and could not return to the village. For days, possibly for weeks they wandered about in the African jungle. Lobagola, until finally they got to the coast.

A coast steamer off shore excited their curiosity and the boys who had never before seen the ocean or the surf, or a canoe, launched a canoe and paddled to the ship. There they investigated until 13 of the little boys were struck with terror by the landing whistle of the ship so that they all jumped overboard where they were devoured by the sharks.

Lobagola, when that happened, had penetrated into the ship and when he returned to the deck he was a long distance from shore and his companions were gone. From that misfortune dated the experiences which he says has made his life unique for he had acquired a coating of western civilization and from time to time as he grew up, he returned to his people, where he was thought to be infested with devils because of his penetration of the strange white man's country.

There are a number of African folk stories in the book, a description of many tribal customs and African animal lore. Green Wine, by Owen Archer, published by William Morrow and company.

The story of "Green Wine" is of Hugh Whittingham. As a child he was unattractive. When he became a man his fine character, his soft brown eyes, his healthy physique offset his rugged features. But by that time Hugh was obsessed with the belief that he was ugly and particularly unattractive to women.

As a boy in school his boy companions had been won to him first because he had prowess in athletics, later for himself. At parties, where he was thrown into association with girls, it was different. His mother, when she kissed him, always frowned and shut her eyes. Once he heard two of the maids talking. In their simple minds they coupled Hugh's ugliness with his father's philandering with one of the maids. "Ugliness," said one, "goes right down to the bone."

Hugh decided that women were not to be in his life. But several fine and loving women brought about a change, though not before Hugh passed through periods of suffering, of self-reproach and of painful loneliness.

The Jewel, by Claire Goll, published by Alfred A. Knopf.

The cheapness of French servants is one of the sensations of the tourist. For only so much and so much their friends living in France have been known to hire a servant who does everything. Here is the other side of the picture, for this is the story of Marie, one of those same little servant girls who went to Paris from her small native village.

Good and innocent and conscientious and devoted was Marie when she went to Paris. She put in long hours and worked hard for her master and mistress. Small wonder that in her loneliness and weariness she fell in love with the handsome Babylas.

Babylas was evil and he planned to steal the coffee of pearls which Marie's master, who was a dealer in pearls, carried about with him. Babylas planned to hit him over the head and snatch the coffee when Dios returned at night to the apartment house. That frightened the good Marie. The trail of consequences was as logical as it was tragic.

The publishers of the book, it is said, have tried an experiment with this book. For it they have devised two covers—one which will appeal to those who like naughty books and the other to appeal to literary folk. It is a good guess that the literary folk will be more satisfied with the book than the other class. The description in the last third is of exceeding merit.

The theme is like that of Theodore Dreiser's "American Tragedy": The wages of sin is death. The style is smooth, more subtle, more discerning.

Book Notes . . .

Charles Scribner's Sons have just secured the American rights to Sir Oliver Lodge's autobiography, which they will publish this fall under the title "Past Years." Sir Oliver's life extends from the certainties of 19th century mechanism to the uncertainties of 20th century relativity, and his participation was important to many of the discoveries which have changed the face of the world and the complexion of society. At the end of his autobiography Sir Oliver speaks about those experiences which inclined him to his unassailably sincere faith in spiritism.

The Theater Guild in New York plans to produce Eugene O'Neill's trilogy, "Mourning Becomes Electra." The three plays are "Homecoming," "The Hunted," and "The Haunted." The pending plan is to give two performances of each play weekly, instead of showing the plays on alternate weeks.

Doubleday, Doran and company has obtained the permission of George Bernard Shaw to reprint his "The Intelligent Woman's Guide to Socialism." Mr. Shaw called the publishers: "The book cannot be too widely circulated to please me. I would issue a dime edition if it were commercially possible."

Muriel Hine, the English novelist, whose latest book is "Ten Days' Wonder," has just had a charming sonnet appear in the London Sunday Times. It is "A Respite." Oh, lingering in a lovely world! A heart-beat falling into space, Or tremor of a golden chord. The spell that binds the wandering breeze

Above the shaken orange trees, Let us not spoil the dainty sorrow By touch or whisper. This sweet death

When Time, indulgent, holds his breath Lasts but a moment. Hold it fast. Forgetting that there is a morrow In this, our respite from the past. For lingering is a lover's sign. And, by some miracle, our eyes May look, your spirit sunk in mind.

What is it that makes Von Elm so much better as a business man golfer than as an amateur? It is a funny thing that if George wanted to turn pro he would have to apprentice himself to some member of the P. G. A. for three years before he could become a pro in good association standing, although it would be difficult to find a pro who could show Von Elm how to play golf.

ROAD MEN BUSY ELIMINATING DEATH CURVES

Straightening, widening, shortening—this is the rule of the modern highway engineer. Wherever possible, many times at great expense, curves are being eliminated to make travel for motorists safer and easier.

Engineers throughout the country are bending every effort to make highways and city streets safer for motorists, states E. W. Faby, Pacific regional manager of Chevrolet Motor company. "The state of California is spending millions to straighten and widen roads. Oregon, Washington and all the states of the west are doing the same thing with as much speed as their appropriations will allow. Cities, too, are following the lead and making streets safer."

The California highway commission now has under way a job of straightening that is a real major operation. The Pacific highway in the Klamath river canyon is being completely rebuilt, realigned and several bridges constructed, to take the road out of the canyon and provide a wide, straight highway. This job, which is only a few miles long, will cost several million dollars. The old highway follows the river through the canyon and is narrow and winding. The new road will be high on the canyon wall, crossing and recrossing the river several times on steel and concrete bridges.

"Another example is the new road which will connect Bakersfield and Los Angeles and route travel over a wide highway with few curves. Motorists now use the Ridge route, which is sometimes blocked with snow in the winter. The new road will be much lower and free of snow at all times."

NEW PACKARD CREATES MUCH CAR INTEREST

Since its introduction to the public on June 23 the new Packard car has aroused more interest and comment than any previous new model Packard since the advent of the "twin six," according to word reaching the Packard factories from distributors and dealers.

Intensive work by the company has resulted in a supply of some of the models to nearly all points in the country. However, demands for demonstrations of the revolutionary ride control and other comfort features of the new car have been such that in nearly every city it has been impossible to obtain a sufficient number of demonstrating cars to accommodate everyone promptly.

"This ride control feature of our new car, together with the general smoothness and quietness, seems to have struck right home to the public," said Elvin E. Webb, local Packard dealer. "Of course, there is always a lot of talk about every new thing that goes on an automobile. But here is something the motor car owner can try out for himself. And in the last analysis what having absolute control over riding comfort in an automobile means is better appreciated by actually experiencing it than through all the talking which could be done."

Much speculation has been indulged in by the industry as to what the new car is going to mean in Packard production. Officers of the company in Detroit have offered no information on this score because of a general policy against discussing output figures.

J. W. Peters, vice president in charge of sales, did, however, point to a stack of letters and telegrams from distributors and dealers from nearly every point in the country, in answer to a direct inquiry. They reflected a universally enthusiastic reception of the new car and a general belief that substantial increases in business would result. Several suggested the possibility that the new Packards might offer the impetus for a general revival of buying interest for the whole industry.

OPEN DETOURS ON ARROWHEAD TRAIL

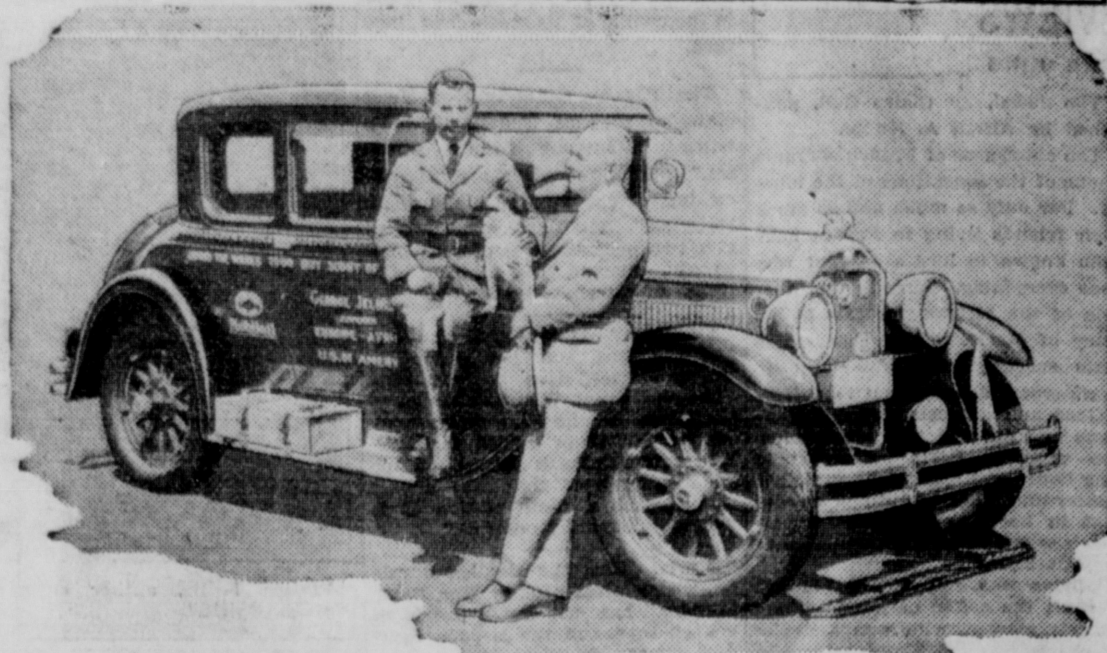

Motorists traveling to Salt Lake City via the Arrowhead Trail will encounter several detours, according to the Touring department of the National Automobile club.

Bridge construction is in progress at the Virgin river, near Mesquite, Nevada, and several short detours are necessary. The highway is being constructed between St. George and Cedar City, Utah, and it is necessary to detour for approximately 20 miles over loose gravel road, near Anderson's junction.

WORK ON BRIDGE IN SAN DIEGO COUNTY

Traffic is not hindered by the construction work on a new bridge on United States highway 101 in San Diego county, one mile north of Del Mar, according to the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Boy Scout Circles Globe

George Jelinski, a native of Poland, returned recently to America from a world tour of more than 100,000 miles. Jelinski, driving a Buick coupe, made the trip in the interests of the Polish Boy Scouts. Jelinski was more than two years in making the trip—visiting 27 countries.

NEW PLYMOUTH IS PRAISED BY ARMY AVIATORS

"In developing floating power, Plymouth has made one of the outstanding contributions to automotive engineering and unquestionably has solved the problem of making a four with the smoothness of an eight."

This statement was made by Major Ralph Royce, famous army aviator attached to the chief of staff's office in Washington. During the recent air maneuvers, Major Royce commanded the observation wing and used a new Plymouth with floating power and free wheeling as his official car.

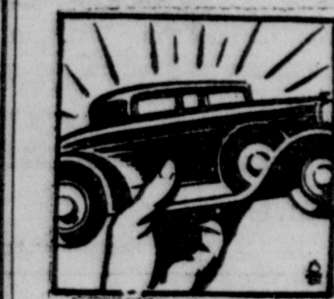

The distinguished flyer, a West Point graduate and former commanding officer of the first pursuit group, who, during the war, held the rank of lieutenant colonel was greatly impressed by the new principles involved in Plymouth's floating power.

"I must confess to having driven the new Plymouth many miles before I learned that it was a four-cylinder automobile and then I made the discovery by lifting up the hood. It has all the performance of an eight as well as the latter's smoothness."

"Had the principles responsible for floating power been developed some years ago there is little doubt in my mind but that the designers and builders of airplanes would have seriously considered retaining the efficient four-cylinder power plant of the earlier aircraft type instead of going to multi-cylinders for smoothness. Had this been the case, today traveling by air would have been much more practical than it is for the four-cylinder power plant is the most economical known to engineers."

BIG BEAR ROAD IS IN GOOD CONDITION

Motorists traveling to Big Bear lake via the Waterman canyon and High Gear road, by way of Lake Arrowhead, thence over the Crest route, will find this route in excellent condition, according to the Touring department of the National Automobile club. It is surfaced practically the entire distance and there are no steep grades or switchbacks. The City Creek road, which is the most direct route to Big Bear Lake, is a wide, oil surfaced road, in splendid condition, although there are numerous switchbacks.

Auto Tourist Is Advised to Know All State Laws

Knowledge of motor vehicle regulations in the western states will add to the safety and pleasure of those touring the Pacific coast this season, according to the Automobile club of Southern California, which notes the following important rules, many of which were passed at the last sessions of state legislatures and are on the statute books for the first time:

Speed limits vary from 35 miles in Idaho, 40 miles in Washington and 45 miles in California, to no limits in Montana and Oregon, the last two states decreeing that speed must be reasonable and proper at all times.

Driver's licenses are required in California, Oregon and Washington, but not in Idaho or Montana. Consisting in neutral is prohibited in four of the five states, Montana being the exception, and it is unlawful to park on the highway in the same states.

All five states require that accidents involving personal injury or property damage must be reported. Stickers are prohibited except in California, which provides, however, that stickers must not exceed seven inches square.

Montana is the only one of the five states which does not make it unlawful to throw lighted matches or lighted cigar or cigarette stubs from cars.

DODGES SHAKEN TO PIECES IN TESTS

To what extent an automobile will withstand the most severe road shocks is determined by one of the most grueling and wracking tests that is to be found in the automotive industry—the Belgian roll.

This test, used constantly by Dodge Brothers engineers, brings out in comparatively short time body and chassis failures not apt to develop under thousands of miles of average driving. An idea of the destructiveness and severity of the Belgian roll test can be gained when it is considered that a new set of tires is completely worn out after 500 miles on the rollers.

Just how the contrivance operates and how completely it wracks chassis and body, so that not a single bolt or nut in the entire automobile escapes almost beggars description.

The car being tested rests on rollers, the front rollers being cleated with strips of 1½-inch hard maple. The two cleats on each of these rollers are set at opposites or alternately so that as the test proceeds the front end of the car is constantly and irregularly thumped and wracked first by one roller and then by the other, hour after hour and mile after mile.

MODERNIZED USED CARS AT GRAHAM PLACES

Modernized used cars, equipped with the latest free-wheeling drive, are made available to the public through the Graham company's decision to supply dealers everywhere with Graham improved free wheeling units for installation in older models.

The Greenleaf Motor company, Graham representative here, declares that this advanced step by the factory will immediately stimulate the demand for Graham cars in the used car market.

"The Graham improved free wheeling, introduced last month, has met with a great welcome everywhere," he declared. "Now that earlier models can be equipped with the same free wheeling unit, many owners will wish to enjoy the advantages of the new drive. It can now be installed in most previous models exactly as in the current models."

"Used car buyers will be particularly interested. Free wheeling is now so popular that everybody wants it."

GILMORE REWARDS LEADER IN SALES

The reward for hard work on the sales front came last week for E. R. (Bert) Williams, when R. A. Rowell, manager refined oil sales for the Gilmore Oil company, announced that Williams had been appointed his assistant sales manager of this department. This will be interesting news to his many friends in oil circles.

"Williams has been with us for several years," says Rowell, "and only recently has he borne the distinction of a title. During this latter time he was known as manager of lubricating oil sales. In all our sales expansion efforts on the coast he has been the advance guard. He has headed the shock troops with which the Gilmore Oil company has invaded every market in the three Pacific coast states."

When Gilmore decided to market a pure Pennsylvania motor oil the details of the introduction of this new product fell on Williams. He has so successfully directed this work that in six months' time Gilmore's 4299 independent service stations and garages now distribute Gilmore Lion Head motor oil. This is a very remarkable sales achievement.

"In his new position Williams will be the roving sales manager. He will be constantly contacting and pepping up every one of the 42 Gilmore branches on the Pacific coast."

TELL REGULATIONS FOR CAMP PARTIES

Just any old shovel or axe will not do when camping in the national forests, motorists are reminded in a dispatch to the touring bureau of the Automobile club of Southern California from the United States forest service.

Persons camping in the forest areas and having campfire permits must also carry a shovel not less than 36 inches over all, with a blade not less than eight inches wide, and an axe not less than 25 inches in length with a two-pound head. This applies to all campers in the national forests, whether packing in or traveling by automobile.

PENN-CAS The Castor Blended Oil COSTS LESS in the LONG RUN

In these days of business depression, many motorists have felt they were economizing by using a cheap oil in their automobiles. However, this is false economy because, although Penn-Cas, the Castor Blended Motor Oil, retails at the usual price for the highest grade oils, 35c a quart, it is in reality the cheapest lubricant you can buy—as a result of the greater mileage obtained on both oil and gasoline, as well as the decreased wear and tear on your motor.

Saves $8000 A Year

In a careful comparative test of motor oils made by a large motor transportation company operating a large fleet of buses, Penn-Cas, Castor Blended Motor Oil, showed an operating cost of $0.0156 per mile—an annual saving of $8000 over the oil that had been used. Penn-Cas makes possible such startling economy records, as well as remarkable speed and endurance tests, because of the Castor Oil. That's the secret of its superiority—the reason you should use it in your own car.

SHELL OIL CO. CHEVROLET CAR TRAVEL BUREAU IS CHOSEN BY VERY COMPLETE PRIZE WINNER

A travel information service that is declared to be the most complete ever offered to Pacific coast motorists has been announced by officials of Shell Service, Inc.

The service centers about a huge V & D Travel Information book kept permanently on file in 700 stations of Shell Service, Inc., in Washington, Oregon and California.

In this book is found every type of information relating to automobile travel and vacations. There is no advertising nor commercial aspect to the venture and the information is therefore not only complete and comprehensive but absolutely unbiased.

The V & D Travel Information book is the result of years of research on the part of Van Dure, full-time travel information man for Shell Service, Inc. It contains complete facts on every town, resort, auto camp, road, park, lake, river, mountain, club and recreational center in the Pacific coast states as well as British Columbia and the northern part of Mexico. It is generously cross-indexed so that the desired information may be easily found.

The huge book is a permanent fixture in 700 Shell Service Inc. stations and is available to the public without obligation.

Van Dure, travel information expert, tours the highways of the Pacific Coast continually making day-by-day reports to Shell Service Inc. headquarters on road conditions and other information of interest to motorists. His reports are considered so accurate and timely they are used as a basis of radio broadcasts by several Pacific coast stations and have been incorporated in a column widely published by Pacific coast newspapers.

The popularity of the six-cylinder Chevrolet was again attested to last week when G. V. Peterson of 1210 East Sixteenth street, Long Beach, chose the General Motors product over its two competitors in the lowest priced field, when offered a free choice as his prize in the Cremo cigar band contest, according to B. J. McMullen, Santa Ana dealer.

Peterson was the fortunate winner of one of the daily free awards which are being made in the national contest conducted over the Columbia broadcasting system, which has aroused so much comment. When advised of the fact that he had been named a winner and that he could pick the car he wanted from three in the low price field, Peterson without hesitation, selected Chevrolet on the record of its performance in the hands of owners, its style and quality.

According to reports from Long Beach the winner is contemplating a long vacation tour in the new car and Yosemite is one of the objectives of the Peterson party.

The Cremo contest, which is sponsored by the American Tobacco company, is creating much interest in automobiles and a wide discussion of the merits of the various cars. In San Francisco it will be remembered that John W. Davy was the lucky winner and that he, too, selected Chevrolet on its economy and performance record. Davy took delivery of his Chevrolet from Don Gilmore local Chevrolet dealer, and recently expressed his unqualified enthusiasm over the handling ease of the new car.

Chevrolet continues to set new economy and performance records according to owners and is one of the outstanding quality values on the American market today, living up to the Chevrolet slogan which has been widely advertised, namely, "The great American value."

WILLYS-KNIGHT NEW SIX SEDAN FREE WHEELING

Featured by new beauty, many engineering advancements, simplified free wheeling and offered at the lowest price in sleeve-valve engine history, a new Willys-Knight six-cylinder automobile is introduced here, announces M. N. Harmon, Willys and Willys-Knight dealer.

Economy, luxury and improved performance ability mark this new creation, which is offered at $845 f. o. b. Toledo, Ohio, bringing it within reach of a new class of owners. It is known as Model 95. The line at present consists of the sedan, victoria, coach and coupe with rumble seat. Free wheeling and safety glass, which are optional, are obtainable at slightly extra cost, he explained.

"The Willys-Knight engineers have perfected a new free wheeling control mechanism," he said. "The control lever stands out from the instrument panel between the steering post and gear shift lever, so that the driver's hand is in a normal position when using it. The lever moves up and down and a cable running from it operates the free wheeling unit which is of the roller clutch type mounted back of the transmission."

"In appearance the car is unusually smart and handsome. Its lines are lithe, low and graceful, lending themselves effectively to the new, rich color combinations employed. The V-shaped radiator and wire wheels with spares mounted forward, give the car close resemblance to the senior Willys-Knight (66-D) introduced the first of this year."

Auto Club Tells Law Changes On Accident Report

Persons involved in traffic accidents in which a person is killed or injured, who fail to report properly to the authorities, may be fined or sentenced to jail, or both after August 14, it is revealed in a warning from the California highway patrol received by the Automobile club of Southern California.

The law says that the driver of a motor vehicle involved in an accident is the proper person to report it, but if the driver is injured or killed, some other passenger in the car shall make the report. The failure of either the driver or some other occupant to report may bring the penalty above stated on either or both persons.

In collisions between two or more motor vehicles, the driver, or if the driver is unable, a passenger in each of the several cars must make a report. It is not sufficient for the occupants in merely one of the cars to report for all vehicles involved.

One important factor of the new accident report law is that the report is strictly for the confidential use of the department of motor vehicles. These reports cannot be used as evidence in court for any purpose whatsoever.

OLDS FACTORY FIRST OPENED 35 YEARS AGO

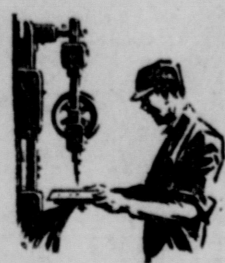

August 21 marks the thirty-fourth anniversary of the automobile as an American commercial institution. That date, 1897, the first company to gain recognition in the commercial manufacture and sale of automobiles was officially incorporated in Lansing, Mich. The company is Olds Motor works, manufacturers of Oldsmobile and a division of General Motors.

But it is practically 35 years ago that this veteran company had its first inception. At that time Ransom E. Olds and Frank Clark, two young men of Lansing, were busily experimenting in fitting a little gas engine into a carriage and making the contraption run. These early efforts resulted in the incorporation of the company, the appointment of Olds as general manager and the issuance of instructions for him "to build one carriage in as nearly a perfect manner as possible." The "carriage" was completed before the close of the year and now reposes in an honor place in the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D.C.

Then started the efforts toward commercial manufacture. And then, also, started the battle which meant the success or failure of this infant industry. This battle had two major fronts. One was to design and build a car a layman could operate. The second—and equally important—was to educate the public to accept the automobile as a means of transportation.

Police Combat Crime Through Radio-Equipped Automobiles

The San Francisco Department of Electricity has just completed the city fire and police broadcasting station. Each of the Buicks in the service of the police department is being equipped with a special radio receiving set constantly tuned in on this new transmitting station. On the left Police Chief Quinn is seen transmitting instructions to the police cars. In the center picture he is pointing out the receiving set in the Buick car. On the right the director of the Department of Electricity is seen explaining the operation of the transmitting station.

share in these tasks. In 1900 it produced 1400 cars—and sold them. Its slogans of those early years were "The Passing of the Horse," "Nothing to Watch but the Road," "The Best Thing on Wheels," "Good Bye, Horse" and "A Trolley Car that Needs no Track."

In 1903 it built the "Olds Pirate," a racing car which that year made a new mile record at Daytona Beach. It shipped the first American-made automobile to Europe and opened the first export business. It won the first Tour de France, Europe's greatest endurance and reliability run. It won the first American transcontinental race, with "Old Scout," a one-cylinder Oldsmobile, which now is retracing the route of this first race from New York City to Portland, Ore., with Dwight B. Hoss, the original driver, at the tiller. These are a few of the feats Oldsmobile accomplished to bring favorable attention to the capabilities of the automobile.

In engineering, it introduced one of the most reliable one-cylinder motors. It was the first to use two and four-cylinder engines in moderately priced automobiles. Likewise it was among the pioneers in the six and eight cylinder fields. It inaugurated quality production methods. In 1923 it introduced the lowest priced six cylinder car ever produced up to that time. Three years later in perfected chromium plating for automotive uses and gave it to the industry. Throughout these years it has pioneered in engineering design.

As a keystone of the industry during the early days it also played an important part. An order for Oldsmobile transmissions started the brothers Dodge in the industry. Another order for engines resulted in Henry M. Leland, of Cadillac fame, becoming interested in motor cars. Many high executives of the industry today were once connected with Oldsmobile.

Much has happened during the 34 years ending August 21, in fact far more than the most optimistic of these early pioneers anticipated. The automobile industry has revolutionized business, pleasure and home life. It has made possible great cities with far-flung suburbs. It has changed lives and habits. And throughout it all, Oldsmobile, the pioneer, has continued well up among the leaders.

MODEL MUNICIPAL TRAFFIC ORDINANCE HOLDS INTEREST OF SEEKERS AFTER SAFETY

By A. W. KOEHLER

Secretary National Conference on Street and Highway Safety,
Washington, D. C.

With the sessions of the legislatures for the present year nearly all closed, attention of those interested in improvement of motor traffic conditions is now being directed particularly to the adoption of the model municipal traffic ordinance and the manual on street traffic signs, signals and markings by cities and towns. The following suggestions as to practical measures for adoption are made by the national conference on street and highway traffic in response to numerous requests from organizations and individuals in all sections of the country interested in traffic matters.

The model municipal traffic ordinance first became available in August, 1928. Along with the uniform vehicle code and the reports of special conferences committees dealing with various aspects of the traffic situation it was revised in certain respects in 1930 by the third national conference on street and highway safety. After careful review by the conference in 1930 to ascertain whether it might be desirable to revise the ordinance it was found that in general little change was needed. The few changes which were regarded as desirable were made in the light of experience with the ordinance on the part of cities and towns which had adopted it prior to May, 1930. These changes were made in order that the ordinance as revised might meet present day conditions more fully. The ordinance has been adopted to date in whole or in substantial part by numerous cities and towns both large and small throughout the country.

The essential part of the model ordinance consists of the sections dealing with matters strictly within the province of municipal traffic regulation such as authority of police, designation of crosswalks, safety zones, traffic lanes and prohibition of left turns, restrictions on loading or unloading in certain places, regulation of stopping and parking of buses and taxicabs, parking prohibitions and restrictions applying to all traffic, designation of through and one-way streets, limitations on turning around and backing. All of the above need to be covered by ordinance or regulation in each municipality and are not generally suitable to be dealt with by state law. The foregoing sections are drawn up in such a manner as to be adaptable to particular local conditions by the insertion of names of streets or other details according to conditions in the locality.

Cities and towns in states which have adopted Act IV of the uniform vehicle code as revised by the third national conference on street and highway safety and the American Bar association in 1930 will find it very simple to adopt the remaining provisions of the model ordinance herein referred to and not already included in the state law. By so doing they will more completely insure their securing the maximum benefits to be derived from the operation of these modern and effective traffic measures. They may also wish to repeat in their ordinances certain state law provisions for emphasis and educational purposes.

An appendix to the model ordinance contains a number of state law provisions for emphasis and educational purposes. An appendix to the model ordinance contains a number of state law provisions suitable for this use. These provisions are either identical with the uniform vehicle code or adapted therefrom to meet urban conditions. It is also pointed out that in those states where repetition of state law provision in municipal ordinances is necessary for purposes of local enforcement or in the event state law provisions are inadequate, the provisions suggested in the appendix to the model ordinance or such portions as may be desired should be included in the ordinance.

To the extent that the motor vehicle law of a state has not been brought into full conformity with the uniform vehicle code as revised in 1930, cities and towns in the state will find it desirable to adopt suitable provisions by ordinance pending their adoption by state law.

In certain states still having state law provisions not in harmony with the national standards it will be necessary to amend the state law bringing it into conformity with the uniform vehicle code as revised in 1930 before cities and towns can put into effect the model ordinance in its entirety. Even in these states, however, early adoption by the cities and towns, of all provisions of the ordinance consistent with the state law would be a long step toward uniformity.

The manual on street traffic signs, signals and markings provides the technical details as to shape, size, color, location, etc., of devices essential to the safe and orderly conduct of traffic in cities and towns. Uniformity is obviously important as in the case of traffic laws and regulations which prescribe the conduct of motorists and pedestrians with reference to the signs, signals and markings. These standards, which are already in effect in a large number of cities and towns, are designed for adoption by the traffic authorities without the need for legislation. They are in accord with the provisions of the uniform code and model ordinance and conform to the system of standard rural signs adopted by the state highway officials.

Taken together these standards provide the basis for nation-wide uniformity in motor laws, ordinances, and traffic control devices.

DEVAUX SETS RECORD OVER MILE COURSE

A measured mile course at a speed of 35 miles an hour!

This is the record established recently by a Devaux 6-75 sport sedan on the San Pablo dam highway, near Oakland, Calif., according to word received here today by B. E. Morthland, local Devaux dealer.

The test was officially supervised by Sergeant Charles Hardie of the Albany police department and Motorcycle Officer F. M. Gilbert of the El Cerrito police department. The former rode in the car, driven by C. H. Nilsson, an amateur driver, while the latter paced the Devaux on his motor cycle and checked it with his super-accurate speedometer.

"Before starting in this test Sergeant Hardie and Officer Gilbert completely checked the car and declared, in a signed statement, that they found it to be stock in every respect," declared Morthland.

"A portion of their letter then asserted: 'With Officer Hardie as observer and C. H. Nilsson driving, the Devaux was checked traveling at a speed of 35 miles per hour over a mile course on the San Pablo dam highway in Contra Costa county.'

"The car tested was a privately owned car and had been driven 5500 miles. We might add that it held the road wonderfully well traveling at such high speed.

"As a result of this speed check Sergeant Hardie purchased a Devaux 6-75 coupe and is using it in his police patrol work in Albany."

DEER HUNTING IN VENTURA IS GOOD

The Frazier Mountain park district and in the vicinity of Boney mountain, Ventura county, are good deer hunting grounds, according to the Touring department of the National Automobile club. To reach the Frazier Mountain park district, drive over the Ridge route to Sandbergs and approximately nine miles beyond, then take the road that leads to the left. To reach Boney mountain, follow the Malibu highway from Santa Monica to Deer canyon, then continue over the road leading through it.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN — PICTURES BY KNICK

The great big fish that had been hooked was now on deck and, my, it looked really funny as it flopped around. "What is it?" Scouty cried. "A Jewish and a huge one, too. Of that size I have seen but few. There's lots of food upon that fish," the Travel Man replied.

And then they watched some more fish caught and hauled aboard. The seamen taught the Tinies how to pull them in. It was a lot of fun. By now 'twas late afternoon. One man said, "We are quitting soon. You Tinies better row to shore. Our fishing day is done."

The Tinies thanked the men and went into their rowboat. There they spent a little while at rowing around and then they reached the shore. That night they all slept in a hut where everything was quiet but the sound of waves upon the beach. My, how the waves did roar.

Next morning as the sun arose the Tinymites jumped into their clothes and then the Travel Man said, "We are going to leave today. To old Tahiti we are bound and there some new sights will be found. It is on the Society Islands. They were soon upon their way. This time the boat they took was grand. Soon Clowny met a kind deckhand who showed them all around the ship, from top deck to the hold. "On this boat I just love to ride," said Coppy. "It is warm inside the cabins, but out on the deck it's really cold."

They all enjoyed the trip a lot. Soon Scouty cried, "Gee! I can spot the islands through these glasses, and we'll very shortly dock." And he was right! The ship pulled in. The Tinies landed with a grip, and gazed along a busy wharf that ran block after block.

(The Tinymites hear some native songs in the next story.)

STANDARDS OF EGGS OUTLINED FOR CONSUMERS

Poultrymen of California have been leaders in their industry in establishing standards for their commodity. Recognizing that the interior of every egg is not the same even though enclosed in a sealed shell, regulations have been promulgated to insure to the consumer a standard quality of product providing the same grade is purchased each time.

Standards are based on two qualifications: (1) quality, which has to do with the size of the air cell, and condition of the white and yolk of the egg; (2) weight. Thus, the consumer must bear in mind that these two factors of interior quality and weight are factors which influence the grade in which the eggs are sold.

Quality Specifications
On quality basis the eggs are graded into four classes, namely: special, extra, standard and trade. Eggs in order of rank. Specials are eggs uniform in size, reasonably clean and sound, the air cell localized and not over 3/16 of an inch in depth. The white is clear and firm. There can be no germ development and not more than two eggs allowed per dozen of the next lower grade, which is extra.

Extras are eggs meeting all of the requirements of specials with the exception that the air cell cannot be over 1/4 inch in depth and may contain two eggs per dozen of the grade of standard.

Standards are eggs uniform in size, reasonably clean and sound, with the air cell slightly tremulous but not exceeding 1/2 inch in depth. The germ development may be slightly visible.

Trades apply to all edible eggs falling below the quality specifications for standards.

Weight of Eggs
According to weight, eggs are graded into four classes, namely, large, medium, small and peewee. Large eggs shall weigh not less than 1 5/8 ounces each and shall average not less than 23 1/2 ounces per dozen. Medium eggs shall weigh not less than 1 1/2 ounces each and shall average not less than 20 ounces per dozen. Those eggs weighing less than 1 1/4 ounces each will be classed as peewee eggs.

Thus, the term large eggs would imply eggs averaging at least 23 1/2 ounces per dozen, uniform in size, shell reasonably clean and sound, with the air cell localized and not over 1/4 inch in depth. The whites would be clear and firm, no visible germ development and not more than two eggs per dozen of the grade of standards.

Frequently merchants use the terms eggs, ranch eggs, farm eggs, or similar terms of identification. In such instances such eggs are constructed in the egg standardization act to mean eggs defined as large extras. If eggs of lower grade or of smaller size are offered for sale the consumer must be notified by a suitable sign or label of the correct quality and size.

Enforcement of the egg standardization act is in the hands of the health department. The department solicits the co-operation of the producers and consumers in maintaining the high standards that poultrymen have voluntarily placed upon their commodity.

FROZEN FRUITS RADIO SUBJECT ON AUGUST 11

Beginning each day at noon and continuing 10 minutes, talks of interest to farmers, growers and producers will be given during the week beginning August 10, under the auspices of the agricultural extension service, co-operating with radio station KFI, as follows:

August 10—"Farm Bureau, the Voice of American Agriculture," Earl Maharg, executive secretary Los Angeles county farm bureau.

August 11—"Frozen Fruit and Vegetables," G. L. Marsh, division of fruit products, University of California.

August 12—"Diseases of Ornamentals," R. R. McLean, agricultural commissioner, San Diego county.

August 13—"Fire Prevention versus Fire Suppression," Judge Harold Ide Cruzan, vice president Los Angeles Conservation association.

August 14—"The Rabbit Show at the Los Angeles County Fair," L. D. Sanborn, assistant farm advisor, Los Angeles county.

Over 8 Per Cent Of Land Denuded By Fires In State

Slightly more than eight per cent of the land area of California has been denuded by forest fires within the past 10 years, a survey made by the Conservation Association of Los Angeles county discloses. The fires burned over 8,409,411 acres, causing a damage of $14,144,115 and costing $9,312,116 for suppression.

TEMPERATURES AFFECT COWS. TESTS REVEAL

That changes in environmental temperature between 35 and 100 degrees Fahrenheit and much more potent in their effect upon the physical well being of Jersey cows and upon the amount of physico-chemical characteristics of the milk produced than are changes in relative humidity between 20 and 90 per cent, are conclusions to be drawn from an experiment just completed by the animal husbandry and dairy divisions of the University of California.

In this experiment, conducted by Prof. W. M. Regan of the animal husbandry division and Prof. G. A. Richardson of the dairy industry division, two Jersey cows were kept for 45 days in a large psychometric room in which any desired temperature and humidity within the limits stated above may be accurately maintained. The percentage of fat in the milk showed no tendency to increase as the temperature was lowered. The percentage of casein showed a tendency to vary directly with the temperature.

Less Milk With Heat
Coincident with the high temperatures, however, a very definite falling off in milk production, as much as 10 per cent in five days; a marked increase in the rate of respiration, and a significant rise in body temperature was noted.

The amount of water consumed was influenced more by the environmental temperature than by the amount of milk produced. Neither temperature nor humidity affected the pulse rate.

Relative to the physical and physico-chemical properties of the milk certain definite changes were produced by variations in climatic conditions.

Other Results Noted
The high temperature periods induced freezing point depressions indicating a lowered concentration of substances in solution.

High temperatures produced decreased hydrogen ion concentrations.

No significant, consistent changes were produced in the electrical conductivity of the skim milk; the conductivity of the whole milk bore an inverse relation to the fat content.

L. A. FAIR AWARDS TOTAL $110,000

Stunning pre-eminently among the great fall features of Fiesta year in California is the 10th annual Los Angeles county fair to be staged again in the beautifully landscaped exposition grounds at Pomona. Opening its doors at 10 o'clock on the morning of September 18, the notable display will remain open for the following 10 days through September 27. Already the final plans and preparations are in full swing for what promises to be the greatest combined display of agriculture, animal and industrial exhibits ever staged in the west.

Secretary-Manager C. B. Afflerbaugh announces that approximately $110,000 will be paid out in cash and trophy awards and that it will require 75 judges to place the ribbons in the many departments. The total amount of the prize money is the largest in the history of the fair. Last fall the attendance reached 300,000. This year, with many of the other fairs and attractions eliminated, it is confidently expected that attendance will reach half a million. At least that is the goal set by the officers of the fair.

Avocado Grower Leaves for Old Home In England

Murray Horne, for several years a director on the Orange county farm bureau board of directors, representing the Yorba Linda farm center, recently paid his respects to the far advisor's office and bade farewell prior to leaving for his old home in Hereford, England.

Mr. Horne was a lemon grower while residing at Yorba Linda. About five years ago he moved to Carlsbad to engage in the bulb business and avocado growing. He has always been a flower fancier and has produced prize-winning specimens at many of the flower shows held in Southern California. Mr. Horne will leave for England in the near future to resume his residence there among his kindred. He is taking a letter of introduction from Farm Advisor Harold E. Wahlberg to Sir John Russell, director of Rothamstead experiment station, with whom the farm advisor spent two months last year.

FUMIGATORS USE PORTABLE DEVICE

Plant quarantine inspectors of the United States Department of Agriculture have adapted a portable hand-operated apparatus to fumigate freight cars upon entry into this country at points along the Mexican borders where no ear fumigation houses are available. This method is an improvement over the old pot method formerly employed for this purpose, say officials of the plant quarantine and control administration.

The portable apparatus consists of a container for liquid hydrocyanic acid, equipped with an air pump and spray hose. When not needed, liquid hydrocyanic acid is more than 10 pounds of gas is a fumigant can be quickly applied by means of the hand applicator. In fumigating cars the car is sealed, one door being left slightly ajar, and a spray rod, equipped with an ordinary spray nozzle, is thrust through the opening. The applicator and liquid hydrocyanic acid is forced through the nozzle by means of air pressure developed by a hand pump. Great care in handling the hydrocyanic acid, of course, is necessary, as it is quite as deadly to human beings as to insects.

ASK SUGGESTIONS ON FARM TOPICS

Every Monday evening from 6:45 to 7 o'clock the agricultural extension service and farm bureau sponsor a program of agricultural interest over KREG at Santa Ana.

A variety of subject matter is presented which, in the course of a year, covers many of the problems relating to agriculture. In arranging the subjects an effort is made to have them coincide with cultural, disease and pest control, and management problems that are arising in the field at that season of the year. This problem has now been handled for over a year, during which time many favorable comments have been received. Suggestions as to subjects will always be welcome.

The time formerly allotted this program was from 7 to 7:15 p. m., but, believing that many of the farm people would welcome an earlier period, the time was advanced.

Index of Prices Down One Point

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8.—A decline of one point from June 15 to July 15 the index of farm prices is reported by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture. The July 15 index at 79 is 32 points below July a year ago. The grains index declined 10 points during the month, as a result of a further sharp decline in wheat and of lesser recessions in oats and barley. Corn and rye just about held to the level of a month ago, showing a slight tendency upward.

The fruits and vegetable index declined four points largely the result of lower apple prices; and dairy and poultry products and the unclassified group declined one point each. Minimizing the effect of these declines on the all-commodity index was a six point rise in the price index of cotton and cottonseed, and a rise of one point in the meat animal group which reflects an advance in hog prices.

$10,000 SOUGHT FOR CAMP
BOSTON, Mass.—An appeal for $10,000 for the Volunteers of America summer camp is being made by the Boston city council, headed by President Joseph McGrath. Among those sponsoring the appeal is Governor Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts.

RECLEANING OF GRAIN NEEDED. SAYS ADVISOR

By W. M. CORY
Assistant Farm Advisor
Grain that is to be planted for seed purposes should be carefully recleaned before being sown. This operation will not only largely remove all foreign seed and refuse which may only clog up the drill or take the place of a good seed, but will also remove the loose smut balls frequently seen in sacked grain.

Growers have occasionally expressed the opinion that seed treatment for the control of smut has not been as efficient as desired. From recent tests made by the bureau of plant industry of the United States department of agriculture, 100 per cent healthy heads were obtained where the smut balls had been removed before the seed was treated, either with copper carbonate or formaldehyde. In lots of grain where the smut balls were not removed before treatment, four per cent smutted heads were found in the lot treated with copper carbonate and 28 per cent smutted heads found in the lot treated with formaldehyde. From this it is evident that the copper carbonate dust is a more effective destroyer of smut than is the formaldehyde treatment, where the smut balls are not removed. It is thought that the reason for this is because the copper carbonate dust leaves a protective covering over the seed after treatments, which stays there, whereas formaldehyde evaporates and leaves the seed free for recontamination.

$1000 ALLOTTED IN DRILL TEAM PRIZES

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 8.—The California state fair has hung up $1000 in cash prizes for a statewide contest among drill teams of lodges, patriotic societies, clubs and their auxiliaries to be held at the fair September 6, the second day of the exposition.

This contest was one of the features of the state fair last year, attracting competition from all parts of the state. The competition last year was won by the drill team of the Sacramento lodge of Elks. Charles W. Paine, secretary-manager of the fair, announced that entries for this contest will close August 15. The contest is open to all organizations which have teams, except regularly constituted military organizations.

Low Wheat Yield Seen In Russia

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8.—Russian grain crop prospects are being reduced by hot, dry weather, according to a cable report from Agricultural Attache L. V. Steers, received by the Foreign Agricultural service, said the U. S. Department of Agriculture today. Yields per acre decidedly below last year are indicated, especially for the late sown spring crops. So far as wheat is concerned the prospective lower yield will be somewhat offset by the increase of about 7 per cent in acreage this year over last.

Hot weather has hastened the ripening of crops and is said to be rendering harvesting difficult because of the early maturity of the spring crops along with the winter crops. Loss from untimely harvesting and inefficient field work is reported. Slow developments of harvest in North Caucasus where previous rains delayed work and caused lodging are complained of in the Soviet press and also confirmed by private reports. The central, eastern and southeastern sections of Russia appear to be having very hot weather.

Grain Poisoned In Squirrel War

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 8.—Farmers in California last year used within 15 per cent as much squirrel poison as in previous years. The record, as shown by the annual report of Joseph Keyes, in charge of rodent control for the United States biological survey and the California department of agriculture, indicates that 1,700,000 pounds of poison grain was distributed and 491,000 pounds of carbon bisulphide on an area of approximately 6,830,000 acres.

The fact that squirrel control during the past year was approximately the same high level as in 1929, according to Keyes, indicates the fact that farmers recognize the importance of keeping the numbers of these pests reduced.

Divide Work Of State Division

The quarantine and pest control activities of the department of agriculture will be strengthened by dividing the work and raising their status to that of divisions, according to an announcement made at Los Angeles by Dudley Moulton, director of the department. A division of quarantine administration, with A. C. Fleury as acting chief, will be set up and be responsible for the development of quarantine policies and the enforcement of quarantine regulations. A second division of entomology and pest control will be set up.

MORGAN RAISES LAMBS

Besides bulls and bears, J. P. Morgan, famous banker and financier, knows something about lambs—other than the Wall Street variety. On his extensive estate at Hertfordshire, England, he raises English lambs, said to be among the finest in the world. Here you see a caretaker on his estate posing three little lambs for a photograph while the proud mother ewe looks on.

GOLDEN STATE IS PRAISED FOR DISEASE FIGHT

California was given a clean bill of health and high praise for the eradication of the foot and mouth disease from this state by Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the division of animal industry of the U. S. Department of Agriculture at a luncheon meeting called by the special statewide foot and mouth disease committee of the California State Chamber of Commerce, held at the Commercial club in San Francisco.

Mohler stated that strict regulations are being enforced to prevent the entrance of live animals, meat products, sausage casings, hides, etc., in all parts of the United States, and told of the excellent co-operation being offered his department by California officials.

The committee, in turn, thanked Dr. Mohler for his outstanding cooperative work in helping California in the foot and mouth disease eradication fight, and for the continued protection given by the United States government, under his direction.

MEN HAVE SWEETER TOOTH

BOSTON.—Men are more fond of candy and sweets than are women, according to Mrs. Ora H. Snyder, president of the Retail Confectioners of the United States. She lists men as preferring the buttery, nutty, chewy and salty types of candy, while women have a preference for fudges and softer candies.

Wisconsin Man To Study Disease At Riverside Station

RIVERSIDE, Aug. 8.—L. D. Batchelor, director of the School of Tropical Agriculture and the Citrus Experiment Station of the University of California, today announced that Dr. Burt P. Johnson of the University of Wisconsin has made arrangements to come to the station for a year for the purpose of studying virus diseases of plants.

Dr. Johnson holds one of the fellowships of the National Research council, and this makes it possible for him to come to the University of California. He has spent three years at the University of Wisconsin in the capacity of research assistant to Dr. B. M. Duggar, who has been working on plant viruses, particularly the virus of the typical mosaic disease of tobacco plants.

P. B. JACOBS GETS GOVERNMENT JOB

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8.—Paul Burke Jacobs, chemical engineer of the bureau of chemistry and soils, has been appointed to direct the factory-scale experiments in the utilization of farm by-products which will be inaugurated next month at Ames, Ia., by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with Iowa State college, according to a statement made by Dr. W. W. Skinner, assistant chief of the chemical and technological research unit of the bureau of chemistry and soils. Doctor Skinner has just returned from a conference at Ames regarding the immediate set-up of the by-product work for which the last conference appropriated $75,000 for use by the department of agriculture.

REPORT SHOWS BEAN IMPORTS DROP IN MONTH

Total bean imports into the United States during June were rather light as compared with June imports in other recent years, amounting to only a little over 35,000 bags, and bringing the total for the season from September 1 to June 30 to about 755,000 bags. Imports during the present season have been only about 54% as great as those during the corresponding period of the 1929-30 season, and well under the average of the past five seasons. Imports in seasons other than 1929-30 and 1927-28, however, were lighter than those of the present season. Data for each season are shown in the table below. Total imports during the entire 1929-30 season were 1,459,000 bags, and the average of the past five seasons has been 1,047,000 bags.

Imports from Europe during June were of negligible quantity. Total receipts this season are therefore practically unchanged from a month ago at 139,000 bags, or less than 19% of the total imports, whereas on the average during the past five seasons Europe has sent about 42% of our total receipts. The proportion coming from Europe has been quite variable however. Total imports from Europe during the entire 1929-30 season were about 472,000 bags, while average during the past five seasons has been 341,000 bags.

Japan continues to be the chief source of beans this season. Imports from that country during June amounted to nearly 20,000 bags, or over 56% of total receipts. Imports from Japan during the ten months September to June have been the heaviest of any season since 1922-23, except 1929-30. Total imports from Japan during the entire 1929-30 season were nearly 601,000 bags, although the average of the past five seasons has been only 341,000 bags, an amount considerably under imports to date this season.

Carelessness Is Blamed for Fires

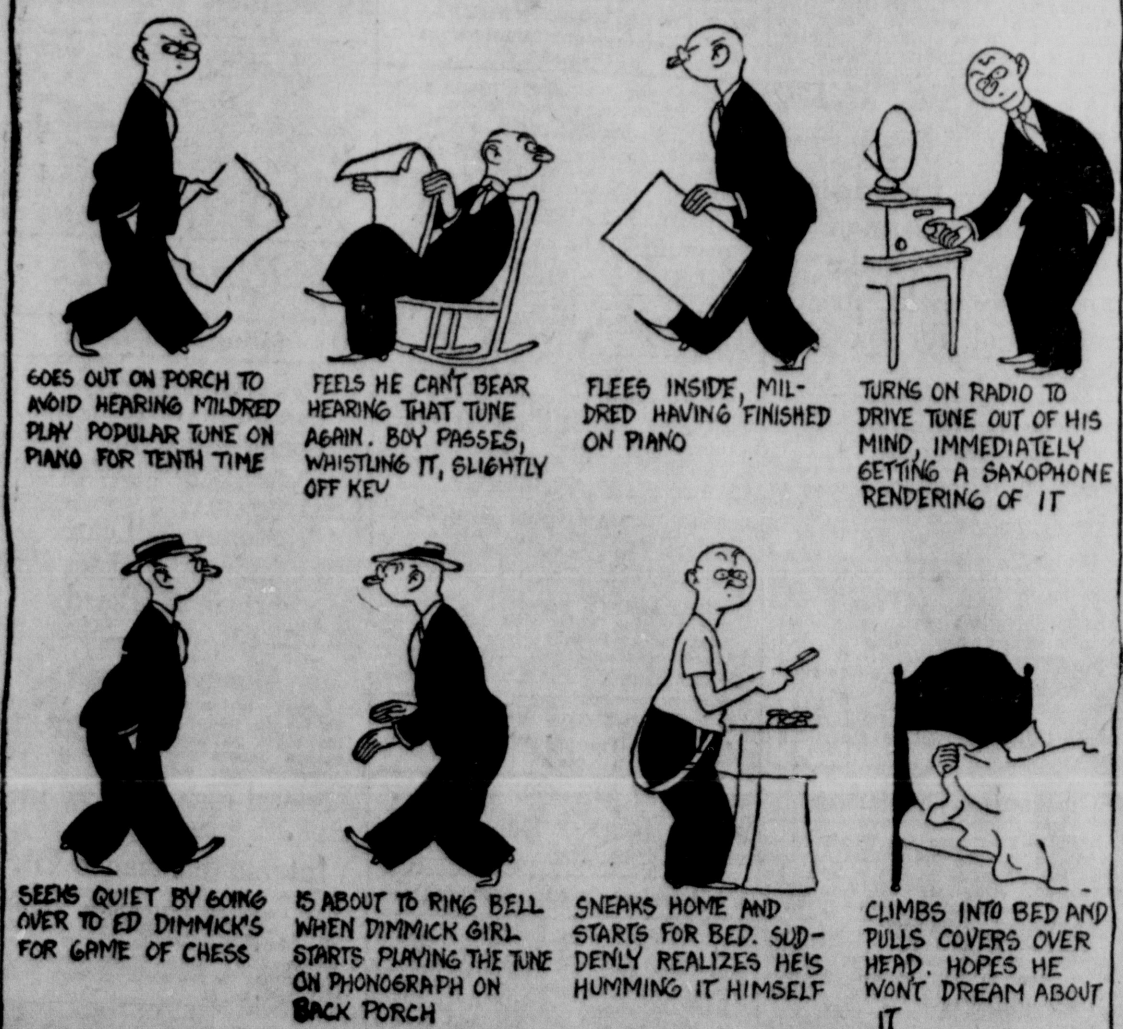

California's huge forest fire tolls are chiefly attributable to human carelessness, records compiled by the Conservation Association of Los Angeles county show. Of a total of 28,926 forest fires in the state during the past ten years, 22,821 were caused by men and were, therefore, preventable. Steps are being taken by many forest protective agencies to halt these public losses through educational campaigns and law enforcement.

HUGE MOUND HORNBLENDE

KINEO, Me.—Mount Kineo, 960 feet high and jutting into Moosehead lake, is said to be the biggest single mass of hornblende in the world. Hornblende is rock containing considerable iron and occurs in distinct crystals and in columnar fibrous and granular form. It once was used by Indians for arrowheads.
